Vicar wants heads of thieves on stakes outside his church

By STEVE KNIGHT & CHRIS MURPHY

AN OUTSPOKEN vicar says he would like to see the heads of thieves who stole valuable lead from the roof of his historic church skewered on stakes.

The Rev Jim Field made the controversial comment after £20,000 of the metal was snatched from St George's in Ivychurch, Romney Marsh, this week.

He told Kent on Sunday: "I know as a vicar I should not be saying this, but if they catch whoever did this, I want their heads on stakes outside. I can't believe this church has been attacked again.

"In this latest attack we have lost lead worth £20,000 and because we had it specially marked, the insurance company will only pay out its maximum of £5,000.

"That means we now have to find all the extra money from somewhere else.

"I used to be at a church in north Kent and that was hit by arson. We have also lost peg tiles from a porch recently. I know as a man of the cloth I shouldn't be asking for heads on stakes, but that is what I think."

According to the national church insurer Ecclesiastical, lead thefts accounted for 2,500 claims last year worth a total of about £9 million. In 2005, just 80 claims, worth a total of £300,000 were made.

Kent Police's crime reduction project manager Julie Argent said: "The number of metal thefts fluctuates with the price of metals. Last year the increasing price of metal in overseas markets led to an increase in theft of metals in the UK for its scrap value.

"What we are seeing now with the current recession and the slowing down of the building industry is a fall in metal prices.

"Consequently we are not seeing as many incidents involving metal thefts as at this time last year."

Mrs Argent's comments will do nothing to calm the mood of Mr Field, who is also vicar of the nearby St Clement's Church that had £50 of lead stolen from its windows earlier this month.

He said: "We just can't understand a society that lets this happen. It has really damaged these amazing windows and for what? A few quid for stolen lead."

At St George's, police believe the thieves used ladders to reach the roof and that the lead may have been loaded into a vehicle parked by the front wall. Ecclesiastical spokesman Chris Pitt said vicars could improve security at churches by cutting back bushes, asking parishioners to walk through the grounds regularly, or by installing CCTV cameras.

He added that all Anglican churches had been provided with forensic SmartWater kits that leave an invisible mark when they come into contact with skin and clothing.

Mr Pitt said: "Metal theft is a serious concern and no church is safe."

Anyone with information about the theft at St George's can contact the police on 01303 289180 or Crimestoppers, in confidence, on 0800 555111.

MP and KCC leader in Parliament clash

Angry words as 'bias' claim dismissed as 'tosh'

A WAR of words has broken out between two leading Kent politicians over a seemingly innocuous business meeting.

South Thanet MP Dr Stephen Ladyman claims county council leader Paul Carter made "biased and inaccurate" comments about the Government at this week's Parliamentary gathering, while also accusing him of hypocrisy over house-building plans for the South East.

In response, Cllr Carter said Dr Ladyman was talking "a load of old tosh".

The argument broke out after a cross-party Parliamentary meeting paid for by the Kent taxpayer and organised by KCC as part of its Backing Kent Business campaign.

Dr Ladyman, who only attended a reception held afterwards, labelled a speech made by Cllr Carter in which he allegedly attacked Government policies as an "embarrassment to Kent".

He said: "Of course, at a Conservative meeting or rally he is entitled to make his biased and inaccurate comments.

"He can ignore the facts as much as he likes and try to pretend that problems in Kent directly caused by his actions were somehow the Government's fault, but he can't do it on the council taxpayers' dime.

"This was a political meeting disguised as an all-party gathering to support local business. He has embarrassed the county, embarrassed the Chambers of Commerce and let down his office."

Dr Ladyman also claimed no Labour politicians were allowed to speak at the event, although Cllr Carter has since pointed out it was chaired by Labour MP Andy Love.

By STEVE KNIGHT
steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

He said: "If Stephen had come to the whole seminar instead of just the reception he would have heard Andy Love speaking about the Government's position on supporting businesses and his work as chairman of the all-party small businesses group.

"This is not about party politics. It is about reaching as many influential and relevant figures in Westminster as possible. It is normal business for a strategic authority with the size and responsibility of Kent."

Despite Cllr Carter's response, Dr Ladyman has still made a formal complaint to KCC over its use of taxpayers' money for what he maintains were party political purposes. He has also accused the leader of "giving away too much" when he spoke about what a Conservative government would do for Kent's businesses.

Dr Ladyman said: "According to Cllr Carter, it is too difficult to get planning permission in Kent. The problem is not too many houses being planned, it is too few.

"A Tory government, according to him, would take the handcuffs off Kent's developers and drive forward a new house-building programme in the county.

"So now we know. The protestations of Kent's Tories about the drive to build houses was a sham. They conned you."

However, Cllr Carter accused Dr Ladyman of talking "a load of old tosh" and had deliberately taken his speech out of context.

He said: "I spoke of the role local government can play by supporting its businesses and also of the need for a bonfire on unnecessary regulations because they're getting out of control.

"I'm in the building industry myself and remember a time when I only needed to fill in two pieces of paper for a planning application. Now it's a lot more, it costs a lot more money and it's an added burden for businesses during a difficult economic time.

"The meeting was all about supporting local firms. I still very much question whether we need an extra 7,000 homes in Kent each year."

Designs lead to a dream come true

By JENNA PUDELEK
jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

THE collection of a young designer has 'turned heads and hearts' to win the coveted top award at this year's Graduate Fashion Week.

Myrto Stamou, who studied at the University of Creative Arts in Rochester, said she had an amazing experience at the showcase event, which looks for the Stella McCartneys and Vivienne Westwoods of the future.

The 24-year-old, who lives in Rochester, said her collection was inspired by the work of the German-born, French surrealist Hans Bellmer, famed for the erotic dolls he created to oppose the Nazi Party.

"For his time he was very provocative and there was a pornographic element to his work," she said. "There are erotic elements in his paintings and drawings so I borrowed elements from his drawings and what they symbolise.

"I came across him by accident when I was looking at a book full of many painters and sculptors, but I was struck by his work."

Miss Stamou was attracted to one of Bellmer's works in particular, Spinning Top, a drawing for a sculpture he never completed.

"It is of a surreal female form spinning and is symbolic of turning the heads and hearts of men," she said.

Richard Bradbury, CEO of River Island, one of GFW's sponsors, said Miss Stamou should be proud of her work.

THE BEST: Myrto Stamou won £20,000 for her collection at Graduate Fashion Week

He said: "Myrto's collection was elegant and beautiful, it showed such a clear vision. At her interview with judges she came in wearing an outfit from her collection, it was so completely together.

"Some of the judges even commented her collection was better than some out there already. It's good enough to be sold."

The judges were struck by her womenswear collection that, she said, specifically owes it muted colours and elegant drapery to Bellmer.

More than 300 fashion design graduates from 21 universities and colleges around the country took part in the catwalk shows during GFW at Earls Court from June 7-11.

One Gold Award winner is selected from winners in 13 categories, which include womenswear, menswear, textiles and accessories.

Miss Stamou received a prize of £20,000 and will see her winning collection displayed in the shop window of River Island's flagship store in London's Oxford Street.

"It was an amazing experience and most of all because I was not expecting it," she said.

Winning the top prize at the event is seen as a golden ticket to success in the notoriously competitive fashion industry. Miss Stamou said she had already received some exciting job offers.

"I like crazy things, but I think it is important to do something that is wearable and flatters the female figure. It is really important to make the body look better than it does," she said.

"I have not made any decisions for the moment. I am considering everything because the next step is very important for the beginning of my career.

"I think about it a lot and I'm taking advice from designers and my tutors."

Miss Stamou, who is originally from Arta in north west Greece, is going home for a while but wants to live and work in London. She praised the course at Rochester said she owed "many things" to her tutors.

She added: "What I realised is that when you work really hard and on something that you love as much as I love fashion, if you follow your dreams they do come true. This was my dream and I worked really hard for it."

Swine flu hits campus

SWINE flu's latest victim is a student based in Canterbury.

On Friday it was confirmed a student on the University of Kent's Canterbury campus has contracted the disease.

Anyone who has been in close contact with the individual was told they are at risk of catching the illness.

The university is enacting its flu pandemic contingency plan, and is working closely with the NHS and Health Protection Agency.

The university's staff and students have all been provided with information and advice. In particular they have been told to be aware of online information and the NHS question and answer section about swine flu.

The university is open and continuing business as usual.

The student is the 11th person to come down with the illness in the county.

NHS advice is to reduce the risk of catching or transmitting swine flu by covering the nose and mouth with a tissue when coughing and sneezing, and disposing of dirty tissues promptly and carefully.

It also advising washing hands frequently with soap and warm water, and cleaning hard surfaces such as door handles frequently, using a normal cleaning product.

Those who suspect they may have the virus are urged to stay at home and phone their doctor or NHS Direct on 0845 4647.

Teachers told to beware Facebook

TEACHERS in Kent have been asked to delete their Facebook accounts after a headmistress was caught boasting about her breasts on the social-networking website.

Belinda Langley-Bliss' page also carried an image of a monkey performing a lewd act as well as a joke about asylum-seekers – both posted by online friends of the head of Dartford's Wilmington Enterprise College.

Education chiefs at Kent County Council have advised teachers to steer clear of Facebook – and similar sites MySpace, Bebo and Twitter – to avoid further embarrassment.

Praise the Loyd for such fine churches

By STEVE KNIGHT
steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

THROUGH the Keyhole presenter Loyd Grossman paid a visit to Kent to discover what type of church volunteers work in a place like this.

Best known for snooping around celebrities' houses on the hit ITV show, the suave American spends his time these days as chairman of the Churches Conservation Trust. During his visit to Kent on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 58-year-old met with volunteers in East Peckham, and at St Peter's Church in Sandwich – one of whom is still working for his church at the ripe old age of 101.

Mr Grossman said: "It's important we connect with these types of people because we rely on them enormously to look after 341 of the country's most historic buildings.

"These churches mean a lot to many people and are often seen as the most important buildings in a community – and I'm especially aware of this as someone who moved to England in the mid-1970s.

"They represent the history and culture of the country and are inspirational, even to people who are not religious, so we're very lucky to have them. Kent has some fantastic churches in rural locations that present a classic view of what they should be like."

St Michael's Church in East Peckham, near Tonbridge, has suffered from vandalism and arson attacks in the past but is now open to visitors every day thanks to the efforts of volunteers working with the Churches Conservation Trust. After congratulating 101-year-old Brigadier William Magan and his wife Maxine for more than 40 years' service, Mr Grossman admitted vandalism was one of the biggest threats to religious buildings in England.

He said: "Vandalism is always a problem. We try to keep all our churches open as much as possible, but unfortunately there will always be lunatics who try to ruin things for everyone else. We're always looking for new ways to prevent vandalism but it's often the way that the more a church is used, the less likely it is to be vandalised. That's one of many reasons why we want to get people back inside them."

As well as being one of the faces of Through the Keyhole, Mr Grossman also presented the original version of the popular cookery show Masterchef and has since marketed a successful range of pasta and curry sauces.

Last year he was named chairman of the University for the Creative Arts – which has campuses in Canterbury, Maidstone and Rochester – and in 2000 was appointed head of a £40 million project to improve the quality of food served in NHS hospitals.

He said: "I gave the NHS four years and it was not a very happy experience. It was difficult to get anyone to take the issue seriously and it remains a problem. Serving good food in hospitals is important because it cheers people up and makes them feel better more quickly, but it seems not everybody understands that."

Meanwhile, church leaders are being invited to a seminar on how to make people feel more welcome. The talk, by representatives of the John Lewis department store, is at St Mary's Church in Park Road, Sittingbourne, between 10-11.30am on Thursday, July 9.

Evensong service honours Dickens

LITERARY giant Charles Dickens' great, great granddaughter attended a service to celebrate the writer's associations with Kent.

Rochester Cathedral was filled for the annual Charles Dickens memorial evensong, which marked the 139th anniversary of his death.

The 40-strong choir of Gad's Hill School – Dickens' former home – played a key part in the service, with other pupils delivering readings and prayers.

Marion Lloyd, Dickens' great, great granddaughter, said: "To come to the cathedral he loved best on the anniversary of his death for a simple service to celebrate his life, with beautiful singing from the children who go to school in his old home, was very moving."

DNA snares brewery teen

A TEENAGE girl who broke into a brewery for a booze-up was caught from traces of saliva left on discarded beer bottles.

The 16-year-old was collared after police traced DNA left on bottles she and friends had been swigging after the raid on the Shepherd Neame brewery in Faversham.

The youngster was one of 16 people aged between 12 and 30 arrested after a spate of break-ins at the brewery.

Appearing before Sittingbourne magistrates, the girl, who cannot be named due to her age, blamed her troubled family history for getting involved "with the wrong crowd".

Susanna Mitchell, prosecuting, said the teenager had taken bottles of Kingfisher and Bishops Finger on two occasions, on April 3 and June 9, when she and an accomplice were disturbed by a security guard.

"The brewery has been raided several times in recent months," Mrs Mitchell said. "Police set up an operation to discover who was breaking in.

"Forensics and CCTV linked this girl to a number of offences. They would break in, drink some bottles and discard others. There was DNA on the bottles police received."

Holly Coates, defending, told the court: "She fell in with the wrong crowd. She was offered £20 by a man to help them collect some beer. Peer pressure was exerted on her.

"She's had a troubled childhood. She was expelled from school aged 12 and has been trying to better herself."

The girl had moved from Faversham to live with her sister in Croydon, where she hoped to start a new life by joining the Army.

The teenager, who pleaded guilty to burglary, said: "I'm sorry, I shouldn't have done it. I won't do it again."

Chairman of the bench Philippe Lecamp gave her a six-month referral order at Sittingbourne Youth Court on Thursday, meaning she will have to attend regular meetings to address her behaviour.

He said: "You know the difference between right and wrong. Hopefully you will never have to come back here again."

Shepherd Neame made no bid for compensation. The 15 others arrested have been bailed to appear at Sittingbourne police station on Monday, July 6.

ALCOHOL was poured down the drain after being seized from underage street drinkers on the Isle of Sheppey.

Police confiscated alcopops, lager and two half bottles of vodka last week after people raised concerns about young drunks.

Officers spoke to the children about the dangers of binge drinking and also handed out a penalty notice to an adult caught buying alcohol for minors.

Police said they would be visiting licensees to remind them never to sell alcohol to children.

Fantasy artist puts his stamp on postal designs

By CHRIS MURPHY
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THE artist behind a new set of stamps featuring mythical creatures is unlikely to ever use his own work – because he never sends letters and only uses email.

The series of stunning illustrations includes a fire-breathing dragon and a boulder-wielding giant, plus a pixie riding a snail like a horse.

The striking images were created for the Royal Mail by illustrator Dave McKean, from Isle of Oxney, near Tenterden.

The six stamps, issued on Tuesday, feature fantastical characters from the UK's rich history of folklore and legend.

The 46-year-old artist's work rate is prolific and has been used in everything from the Harry Potter films to CD covers, books and advertising campaigns. He has even been making his own short films.

Mr McKean told the Kent on Sunday: "I have no idea why the Royal Mail chose me in the end. I have done a fair amount of work that falls into the fantasy category. I have done stuff for the Harry Potter films and a lot of fantasy books, so I guess that could be why they approached me.

"As far as I understand it, they usually give these briefs out to several design companies working with talented people and it is then a process of elimination. It is a bit like a competition and I was in the running.

"You work up a few roughs and gradually work through the process."

And on being the winner, he said: "I have obviously taken this far too lightly, because I have taken it as just an illustration job, which really is what it is to me.

"I do other things like books and films and things where I have a lot more personal investment in the project. This was just a job.

"But everyone else is jumping up and down about it and I guess it's very nice to be on stamps – I had never done it before.

"I had taken it with a pinch of salt – maybe I should have made more of it. These stamps may be going around the world, but as I haven't sent a letter in about five years and just use email, it's all lost on me really as I am not the audience for stamps."

Dramatic

Mr McKean was commissioned to design two 1st Class, two 62p and two 90p stamps.

The dramatic set of images includes a fire-breathing dragon and a stone-grey unicorn on the 1st Class stamps.

The 62p stamps have a boulder-carrying giant, and a pixie riding a snail.

Queen Mab takes the reins of her flying chariot, representing fairies on the first 90p stamp, and is joined by the graceful blue-tinged form of a mermaid.

Royal Mail spokesman Melanie Corfield, who is head of special stamps, said: "Dave McKean's illustrations for these stamps are truly breathtaking. He has created a series of images which by turn are beautiful, amusing and spine-tingling."

Macca's meat-free plea fails to tickle taste buds

By JENNA PUDELEK
jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

A CAMPAIGN encouraging people to go meat-free at the beginning of the week to cut carbon emissions has been met with a lukewarm response in Kent.

Sir Paul McCartney launched the Meat Free Mondays initiative this week by asking households to go vegetarian one day a week to help slow global warming. His campaign is backed by a range of celebrities including Joanna Lumley and Kevin Spacey.

It comes after the Flemish city of Ghent launched Veggiedag, or Veggie Day, in May making Thursdays free of meat and fish.

The pioneering idea, which is not compulsory, is led by the local authority and has seen meat-free meals served in schools and public buildings, including one hospital.

Dr Rajendra Pachauri, chairman of the UN Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, has said the most useful step ordinary people could take to help combat climate change would be to have one meat-free day a week.

People should then go on to reduce their meat intake further, he said.

Kent on Sunday asked the county's public services if they might follow Ghent's lead.

A spokesman for Kent County Council said: "While the efforts of Paul McCartney and Ghent are laudable, we offer a vegetarian option everyday in our offices, services and schools. We educate young people about having a good balanced diet, doing exercise and understanding where their food comes from."

GREEN: Paul McCartney wants us all to take on Meat Free Mondays to save the planet

Medway Maritime NHS Foundation Trust said it would "consider" promoting veggie options: "Because some people don't like vegetables and some need meat because they are suffering from poor nutrition, this would be difficult to enforce, but we wouldn't rule anything out. We will consider promoting the vegetarian options on our menus for nutritional and environmental purposes."

Meat production accounts for 18 per cent of annual greenhouse gas emissions, outstripping transportation at 14 per cent.

Millions of acres of rainforest are cleared for cattle and to grow animal feed each year, which accelerates climate change. The methane emitted from animals is 23 times worse for the atmosphere than carbon dioxide.

The NHS contributes three per cent of all carbon emissions in England. If it were a country it would be ranked 81st as the biggest polluter, according to 2004 figures.

Special occasions

Saving Carbon, Improving Health, published in January, plans how the NHS will reduce its carbon footprint and among the proposals is that hospitals could offer fewer meat and dairy products. But the idea of pushing a meat-free day did not appeal in east Kent.

A spokeswoman for East Kent Hospitals University NHS Foundation Trust said: "East Kent provides vegetarian options both in the canteens and for inpatients.

"Inpatient meals are controlled via the dietetics department. We continue to explore any possibilities which will benefit our patients, staff, and community."

Maidstone and Tunbridge Wells NHS Trust did not response to our enquiry.

The principle of reducing meat consumption is gathering support globally. Germany's federal environment agency went as far as advising people to only eat meat on special occasions. In the US, public health schools, led by the John Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health in Baltimore, have also been running a 'meatless Mondays' campaign.

• See www.meatfreemondays.co.uk for more information on the campaign.

HILARIOUS: Lewis Hamilton and Shaun Williamson are in a short film together

Racing ace turns cabbie for advert

MAIDSTONE-born actor Shaun Williamson may be best known for his grumpy character Barry on EastEnders, but he still can't shake the gloomy style – even when appearing in a hilarious video with world Formula One champion Lewis Hamilton.

He plays a grizzled cab company owner with Hamilton and his McLaren teammate Heikki Kovalainen as his bored drivers.

The pair are playing Top Trumps with the 'supercar' set while they wait for a call.

Stroppy boss Williamson asks Hamilton to make him a tea, but the tetchy driver snaps back "make it yourself" triggering the actor's trademark downtrodden face.

Eventually a call comes in and the two ace drivers 'race' with each other at the legal road speed to be the first to make the pick up of Martin Whitmarsh, the chief operating officer for McLaren.

Hamilton wins the race, and turns round to Whitmarsh asking "Where to, boss?"

The comic video was created to promote a Vodafone competition for tickets to the Italian Grand Prix.

Hamilton made a name for himself on the Buckmore Park kart track near Chatham at the age of eight, when he was spotted by then McLaren boss Ron Dennis.

Freedom for

"A WONDERFUL day for Britain" is how campaigner Joanna Lumley described the ceremony that saw Gurkha troops given the freedom of Folkestone in front of 10,000 well-wishers.

Calling the Nepalese warriors who have just returned from a tour of Afghanistan's Helmand Province "remarkable men", the actress also praised the town for welcoming them into the community.

The people of Folkestone turned out in force on Thursday to greet members of the 2nd Battalion Royal Gurkha Rifles as they paraded along the Leas and through the town.

By NICK AMES
nick.ames@kosmedia.co.uk

The troops wore desert fatigues with wide-brimmed hats as they observed the formal drill marching patterns impeccably.

The spectators roared in approval as the soldiers were told they could "march through the town on ceremonial occasions, bands playing, bugles sounding and banners flying".

A salute to local dignitaries and a scroll carried away by a soldier in a wheelchair confirmed the honour.

Looking absolutely fabulous in black shirt decorated with an ornamental kukri – Gurkha knife – broach, black and green skirt and boots, Lumley said the day showed how the UK could welcome those from different countries and cultures.

Honour

The actress – who spearheaded the campaign to allow retired Nepalese soldiers full rights to stay in Britain – said it was right to applaud "these remarkable men and their families".

She told the crowd: "This is a wonderful day for Britain. You are the spearhead of how this country can welcome people, how this country can recognise a debt of honour.

"This is the day of sunshine, of smiles, of welcome, of celebration of the Gurkhas and Folkestone. Together forever in our hearts."

Lumley, whose father served with the regiment, then spoke about her tireless campaign on behalf of the soldiers and their families.

"I never thought we'd see this day," she said. "But it's come. All things come together. It's fantastic but it was a rollercoaster. We never knew what was coming from one day to the next."

The soldiers were greeted at Leas Cliff Hall by Mayor Janet Andrews, who presented them with the freedom of the town and said Folkestone had taken the Gurkhas to its heart.

The town's Tory MP Michael Howard also attended and called it "Folkestone at its best" as he looked at a floral tribute in the form of a crossed kukri badge which had been planted on The Leas.

The MP, who is to step down at the next election, then added: "This will be one day I shall cherish and remember."

Among the crowd was Jill Robinson whose father Jack Wire had fought with the Nepalese troops in World War Two.

She said: "I came for a family tribute – for my father really. He fought with them in the Far East.

"He would have loved this day, had he still been alive. He would have been in the front cheering as loudly as he could. How they deserve this honour."

At the barracks, the soldiers were then presented with medals in recognition of their role fighting the Taliban in Afghanistan.

Among those honoured were three soldiers who suffered severe injuries in the conflict and are now in wheelchairs. Riflemen Kushal Limbu, Vishal Rai and Anil Gurung were all maimed during the tour.

Rfl Limbu lost both his legs in a bomb attack on a Warrior armourd vehicle which killed his comrade Colour Sergeant Krishna Dura.

He said: "I feel lucky I am still here, it was very kind of so many people to turn out. I was pleased to see Joanna Lumley."

Before the medal ceremony, tributes were paid in Nepali to C Sgt

HEROES' WELCOME: More than 10,000 people lined the streets to cheer on the Gurkhas

Krishna Dura, along with Rfl Yubraj Rai and Cpl Kumar Pun, who were also killed in the fighting.

Salutations were read out before the Last Post was played, followed by a minute's silence.

The familes of those who died attended the ceremony and were presented with honours by General Sir David Richards, who is soon to take over as head of the Army.

Celebration

The General, who is Commander in Chief Land Forces and Colonel Commandant of the Gurkhas, then inspected the parade, presented campaign medals and spoke to soldiers about their experiences.

Following the parade the soldiers had organised a day of celebration on the fields of their Shorncliffe barracks.

Families were all in attendance as food was cooked while the soldiers took part in tug of war competitions and impromptu golf.

Around 630 members of the unit – known as 2RGR – deployed to Afghanistan last October. They were involved in a number of roles, including working with the Afghan Police and Army, securing the district centre of Musa Qaleh and manning patrol bases just a few hundred yards from areas where insurgents operated.

During the tour they were also involved in several fierce and prolonged battles.

Fundraiser for Di's school

A CONCERT held at the school once attended by the Princess of Wales has been organised by the sister of Dodi Al-Fayed.

Socialite Camilla Al-Fayed was just 12 when her brother and Diana, pictured, were killed in the infamous Parisian car crash of 1997. Today she is the ambassador of the New School at West Heath, Sevenoaks, that uses education to rebuild the lives of traumatised children.

This Thursday, a crowd of about 500 are expected to attend the Lawnfest concert, which will run from 6.30-10.30pm and form part of the Sevenoaks Festival.

Camilla told Kent on Sunday: "I wanted to give the children a chance to work alongside professionals and create a fantastic event that has a positive financial impact upon them.

Princess Diana

"West Heath is close to both my family's heart and mine, and we have watched it develop into an incredible school over the past 11 years.

"I've spent a lot of time there of late and realise how important it is for these children to have the best guidance and education due to their mainstream education breaking down."

Former X Factor contestant Hannah Bradbeer and Frank Sinatra impersonator Anthony Adams – from the BBC's The One and Only – will headline the concert, tickets for which cost £10 and can be purchased either at the gate or by calling 01732 450305.

Agricultural expert fears a food crisis

Farms must change or we'll starve

A RADICAL overhaul of food production is urgently needed or the UK will face food shortages, a farming expert has warned.

Dr Howard Lee, who runs the sustainable land management course at Hadlow College near Tonbridge, said that in as little as five years we are heading for "serious food scares".

"We are going to be facing some potential food shortages and we really need to start doing something radical," he said. "The degree I'm running produces graduates energised to make phenomenal changes. We need to overhall food production."

He said the UK needed to improve its domestic food production: "We need to be more self-sufficient but levels have been dropping over the years. Most British politicians are beginning to realise this really is a crisis. It is one of the many problems we face but one of the most critical.

Droughts

"In a few years imports will be affected by all sorts of issues. For example, the fruit and veg market will find various problems because they are transported by diesel and the price of oil is going back up and it is expected to keep going up. This will impact on the feasibility of moving produce."

Dr Lee's warnings come as the Government published its UK Climate Prediction 2009, which forecasts that unless emissions are significantly reduced, average temperatures will rise by 3-5C by the 2080s. Rainfall will reduce by 50 per cent in the summer and increase by 30 per cent in the winter. There will be more summer droughts and more flash floods.

The report predicts the damage already done means temperatures will be 2C warmer by 2040. And the South East will warm more than other parts of the country.

By JENNA PUDELEK
jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

Dr Lee said: "Climate change and freaky weather is very bad news for agriculture.

"We will not have some glorious Mediterranean climate, it will be hot but there will be more flash floods."

WARNING: Howard Lee

To cope with a reduced availability of fertilisers and pesticides, which rely on minerals and fossil fuels, the cereal farms of eastern England would have to reintroduce livestock so natural waste would make it easier to build up soil fertility.

He said farmers would have to adapt but not enough was being done to help them reduce their reliance on pesticides and fertilisers.

Dr Lee said people in urban areas, 80 per cent of the population, would suffer from the affects of food shortages first.

"There is enough being done", he said. "The Mayor of London's food guru is pushing for rooftop production in London, but that needs to be rolled out more aggressively. Areas around towns and cities need to be redeveloped as market gardens to feed people in cities."

Climate change and a growing global population, which is putting pressure on land for housing and infrastructure, means less land is available for food production.

Dr Lee believes the answer is education, he said: "We need to train people to tackle these issues, but we need to be radical now because for far too long we have been drifting along and not changing anything.

"We have not been doing enough and now it is reaching crisis point."

STARK MESSAGE: Fiona King, inset, gathered with other amputees to raise awareness for Diabetes Week

Diabetes ruined dancer's career

A SUCCESSFUL ballet dancer had her career cut short when she was diagnosed with diabetes as a teenager – then suffered a savage MRSA infection that destroyed half of her left foot, writes Chris Murphy.

Now Fiona King has to strap her leg to a brace, use a hand-controlled car, and is trying to put out of her mind that she could eventually lose the entire limb.

Fiona, 49, from Canterbury, spoke to Kent on Sunday about the rise and fall of her career: "I had been a ballet dancer since I was five. Then when I was 19 I was told I had type 1 diabetes. Like any teenager I didn't take it seriously enough, but I should have done. No teen thinks about what life would be like in decades, but they must."

Fiona trained at the Ballet Rombert in London. She said: "I danced for about 12 years after being diagnosed with diabetes before I finally got too ill to carry on. I went into kidney failure in 2004. All that time I had been battling the diabetes, and it got the better of me at 34."

But her troubles were only just beginning. After being on dialysis since 2002, the dancer underwent a kidney and pancreas transplant at Guy's Hospital in 2006.

Amputation

She said: "I came home, but then I noticed some hard skin on the heel of my foot, it turned out to be MRSA.

"It spread and the doctors were not able to do anything, and in the end they said I had to have my left heel amputated. They wanted to take my whole leg, but as a dancer I pleaded with them not to.

"I have no heel, no Achilles and no underneath of my foot. I need special shoes, and a leg brace to my knee. Without that, my leg would collapse. It's like walking on my knuckles and you can't do that for long. I am still on the journey to recovery."

Fiona added: "My message to young people is to take diabetes very, very seriously.

"The emphasis is that if you stay healthy and eat healthy, you will be OK, but when you are young you think you can get away with anything. You think there is always tomorrow, but sometimes there's not. If it can happen to me it can happen to anyone."

Fiona, who is making a short film on her life, was among a group of amputees who gathered at London's O2 Arena last week as part of Diabetes Week to raise awareness of the dangers of amputation.

A report showed that diabetes patients were at risk of having limbs amputated if hospitals do not regularly check them for infection and make them aware of the dangers of the condition.

Putting Feet First, a study by the charity Diabetes UK and NHS Diabetes, called for people with diabetes to have their feet examined at least once a year, and whenever they are admitted to hospital.

Diabetes is the leading cause of lower-limb amputation in the world and around 5,000 people in the UK with diabetes undergo leg, foot or toe amputations each year – equivalent to 100 a week.

First high-speed bullet train fired into London

THE first glimpse of domestic high speed rail travel in the country was revealed on Thursday with a return trip between St Pancras and Ashford International.

The Japanese 'Bullet' trains will reduce the journey time from Ashford to London to 37 minutes when regular services begin at the end of this month.

Paul Clark MP for Gillingham and Rainham and minister for transport said: "Companies invest in places that have good transport links. This will improve connections to the capital and to Europe."

The journey to London will certainly be quick. The dash to St Pancras with no stops was just under half an hour in the preview.

However, travellers do not get to see much of the countryside. Not only because it is a blur as it rushes past at 140mph, but also half the journey is spent in tunnels.

The new service has not been universally welcomed. The increased fares and new destination do not suit everyone, but Southeastern is confident that once passengers have experienced the journey, the trains will fill up.

The preview services from Ashford and Ebbfleet start on June 29, with an Ashford return ticket costing £48.70p.

Open-air summer cinema to go on show at beautiful locations

HOLLYWOOD classics will return to the big screen when some of Kent's most idyllic locations play host to a series of open-air cinemas.

Ridley Scott's Gladiator will fittingly be shown within the confines of a Roman amphitheatre as part of The Screen On The Green line-up, while Edward Scissorhands will be made to feel at home among the hedgerows at Walmer Castle, Deal.

The August series – which will be launched at St Augustine's Abbey, Canterbury, with a screening of the Marilyn Monroe comedy Some Like It Hot – is the brainchild of 27-year-old Kent actor George Wood.

By STEVE KNIGHT
steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

He told Kent on Sunday he was looking forward to recreating the success his venture generated in London last summer.

George said: "I always wanted to bring it to Kent because I think some of the towns here are really badly served when it comes to cinemas, and this is just a really nice way to spend a summer's evening.

"But the films will become almost secondary to the beautiful venues they'll be shown in, some of which do not have the high profiles they deserve.

"We've tried to tailor the films to the locations they're being screened at, so it should be great to watch a modern-day classic like Gladiator at Richborough Roman Fort. As soon as I suggested the idea to English Heritage, which owns the site, they loved it and were straight on board.

Special guest

"Obviously I don't think I'd have had the same kind of support had I wanted to screen The Exorcist at Canterbury Cathedral."

Other locations signed up to The Screen On The Green include the manor houses of Nursted Court in Meopham, and Cobham Hall.

Baz Lurhmann's Romeo and Juliet, the cult rock comedy This Is Spinal Tap and the classic Breakfast at Tiffany's round out the collection of films, with the latter being introduced on-screen to audiences by a very special guest.

Former Deal resident George said: "Mickey Rooney is the only surviving member of the golden age of Hollywood and I was lucky enough to perform alongside him in pantomime once. I told him what I was planning to do with The Screen On The Green and said I would love him to introduce Breakfast at Tiffany's, which he starred in back in 1961.

"He agreed and it's just a completely unique piece of footage because he hardly ever does interviews anymore. To receive

A former history student at the University of Manchester, George grew up in a family of entertainers and went on to star in the West End musical Oliver!, as well as become a presenter of the 1990s children's television show The Disney Club.

He said he came up with the idea for The Screen On The Green when he was temporarily forced to give up acting after breaking his leg in a scooter accident.

George said: "I didn't know what I was going to do with myself at first because I knew it was going to be five or six months before I could act again. But then I had the idea of putting on open-air cinemas, which are quite a big deal in America.

War films celebrate heroes

A FESTIVAL showing classic World War Two films has been organised to run alongside celebrations for Armed Forces Day.

The Historic Dockyard Chatham is hosting the first Armed Forces Day next Saturday. The event will feature a parade through the town centre and a Royal salute.

There will also be displays, activities and a fly past by the Red Arrows, and Hurricane, Spitfire and Lancaster planes of the RAF Battle of Britain Memorial Flight.

One of the film festival's highlights will be A Matter of Life and Death, starring David Niven. It was written, produced and directed by Michael Powell in 1946. Powell was born in Bekesbourne near Canterbury, and went to school at the Kings School in the city.

He went into movie making in 1925, and was nominated for Oscars three times before his death in 1990.

A Matter of Life and Death was named the second greatest British film ever in a 2004 poll of 25 movie critics for Total Film magazine, behind the original Get Carter.

The British Armed Forces Veterans' Film Festival is at the Central Theatre, Chatham, and starts on Wednesday, June 24, with a screening of the 1942 film In Which We Serve at 3pm, followed by A Matter of Life and Death at 7.30pm.

The following day there are screenings Carve Her Name With Pride, followed by the 1969 classic Battle of Britain, which was largely made in the skies of Kent where The Few were based at airfields scattered around the county, including Biggin Hill and Hawkinge.

Each film will include a brief introduction by host Nick Walker and tickets cost £5, but veterans can pay £2.50 for up to two tickets, but they need to show their badge when purchasing.

A Medway Council spokesman said: "It's also an opportunity for younger filmgoers to experience the classics on the big screen for the first time."

Meanwhile, tomorrow, veteran Tony Richards, 82, from Hempstead, Gillingham, will help raise the flag in celebration of Armed Forces Day.

For more information on the film festival, phone the box office on 01634 338338 or book online at www.medway.gov.uk/theatrebooking.

The county's non-Tory councillors are few in number and face a daunting task

'Democracy needs

The Kent County Council elections this month saw the Tories swept back to power after taking 74 of the 84 seats at County Hall. Such a crushing victory has raised questions about democratic accountability and how effectively 10 opposition councillors can scrutinise the decisions of the ruling party. Here, Lib Dem (seven seats), Labour (two) and Swanscombe and Greenhithe Residents' Association (one) members explain to STEVE KNIGHT and JENNA PUDELEK how they plan to be more than token opposition

A SCRUTINY hotline and greater public involvement are among the Liberal Democrats' plans to stop the Conservatives abusing their massive majority at County Hall.

KCC's chamber of 84 seats is now made up of 74 Tories, seven Lib Dems, two Labour and one Swanscombe and Greenhithe Residents Association after the June 4 local election.

Cllr Trudy Dean, now the leader of the opposition, said scrutinising the council's work would be the greatest challenge for the party, which won two seats and lost one at the polls.

"We've already said we're not going to be able to do that without the help and support of Kent residents," she said. "We want a hotline to the scrutiny committee for the public to use. This would mean we are able to pick up more on the issues people are concerned about."

The Lib Dems have been accused of being too complacent to provide a productive opposition to the Conservatives in Kent.

Cllr Dean, who spoke to Kent on Sunday while on holiday in Spain this week, said: "There is evidence we have been sensible about what we choose to oppose.

"We do not support everything, but we do not oppose everything either. If people put something sensible forward we will not oppose them.

"To give an example, we got the bonus levels of chief officers and brought them into the open. They have now been referred to the personnel committee.

"It is about being practical, getting things moving and making a real difference."

Cllr Dean put the Tories' sweeping victory down to a mixture of general discontent with the Government, the Conservatives' deep roots in Kent and people voting for minor parties after the MPs' expenses scandal.

Her party's aims for the next four years are to include more people in council processes, reduce waste and improve the county's roads.

"We want to make the council more critical of itself in a constructive way," she said. "We want to make changes with the help of the public.

"We will establish scrutiny hotline, but also we want to involve the public more in the work we do.

TRUDY DEAN: Opposition leader

"I'm looking into council services and making members of the public form part of select committees."

Cllr Dean said that if, for example, a select committee was carrying out work on children with autism, it would be "immensely valuable" to ask parents of autistic children to take part.

"Also I think young people should be involved," she said.

"They have the youth council, but are still peripheral to the work we do."

Cllr Dean said County Hall's Kent TV internet channel needed to be working on a commercial basis by now' or the authority should stop providing funding.

"It was crystal clear during the election campaign that the delivery of road repairs remains a major issue. People wanted to complain about it.

"In the last two to three years, £17 million has been spent on bureaucratic reorganisation but there have not been many improvements. In fact in some areas it has actually got worse."

LABOUR could have maintained a larger presence on KCC had members focused more on issues affecting their own wards.

That was the message from one of the party's two remaining councillors, Leslie Christie, who along with Cllr Elizabeth Green will now represent more than 80,000 Labour voters between them at County Hall.

Cllr Christie, who was re-elected in Northfleet and Gravesend West, said the likes of his former leader Mike Eddy and the rest of the shadow cabinet might have fared better at the polls had they spent less time at their desks.

He said: "The day I was re-elected there was also a Gravesham council by-election when Labour gained a seat from the Conservatives, and they were the only green shoots for the party in Britain.

"You don't win an election in the three weeks leading up to it, it's the four years before that count. That sustained us because in holding KCC's 74 Conservative members to account during the next four years strong opposition'

people know our faces and know we are looking out for them. The lesson to be learned is you can't win an election from your desk at County Hall."

LABOUR MAN: Cllr Leslie Christie

Before the election Labour held 20 seats and was the official opposition. Having now lost that role to the Lib Dems, many feel the ongoing MPs' expenses scandal and general disillusionment felt towards the Government was to blame for the collapse of the Labour vote.

Cllr Christie said: "Certainly on the doorsteps I spent the first five minutes explaining to people that county councillors do not have second homes. Getting past that barrier was by far the biggest issue we had to contend with."

Cllr Green, who was re-elected in Ramsgate and was a former shadow cabinet member, agreed, and felt those voters who ousted her colleagues may live to regret their decisions.

She said: "I think voters were understandably very angry about the expenses issue in particular, but I had some excellent colleagues who all worked incredibly hard and it was quite sad really that so many lost their seats. It's a shame, but I'm looking forward to them coming back at the next elections. I think that will happen when residents realise we need a strong opposition."

With no leader or shadow cabinet to follow, Cllr Christie admitted he and Cllr Green would have no choice but to "pick and choose" the issues they wanted to fight.

He added that it was a struggle to oppose the Tories when there were 20 Labour councillors, let alone just two. However, Cllr Green was slightly more optimistic. She said: "Leslie and I get on extremely well and I think we can work together well too.

"We can still be a voice for residents and we can still bring important issues to their attention. Our party wasn't in the majority before the elections and, however small it is now, we can still fight for what we believe in."

VICTORY in the county council elections has completed a remarkable rise to prominence for the Swanscombe and Greenhithe Residents Association.

Formed in 1979 to combat unwanted changes to the rubbish collection schedule in the towns, the group has now grown so strong it holds all 20 places on the local town council as well as six on Dartford's district authority.

And on a day when Labour was nearly wiped off the KCC map, house-husband Richard Lees was left standing tall as the association's first representative at County Hall.

He told Kent on Sunday: "I think it comes down to the fact that we live here and face the same trials and tribulations as everybody else. We always put local issues first – there are no party politics involved. That said, I was a little surprised when I won.

"I didn't anticipate success, although some other councillors felt strongly we would get in this year because we've gained a growing share of the vote over the last four or five elections.

"I'm entering quite an uncertain environment, but I'm elated to be doing so. It's a victory for democracy." The final count revealed 37-year-old Cllr Lees had no need for concern, as he was the clear favourite among the people of Swanscombe and Greenhithe. He won with 1,204 votes – 346 more than Tory candidate Sheila East – while Labour's Val Ashenden lost her seat after claiming just 405.

ON THE MAP: Cllr Richard Lees

Cllr Lees said he could see no reason why more residents' associations could not have similar success elsewhere in the county. He said: "I would love to see more groups like ours win seats at KCC. That's not to diminish what the main parties have achieved, but I just think the idea of residents looking after themselves is a brilliant way of using democracy.

"That's the way forward and I'm disappointed we don't see more of it.

"Normally county councillors are only independent because they have left their party after they've been elected.

"Val Ashenden suffered from the national collapse of the Labour vote, but I don't think it helped that she lives outside the area. That may not seem important, but it was to the residents of Swanscombe and Greenhithe."

Cllr Lees, who also represents the Knockhall ward of the town council, said he had always considered getting into politics but that he did not know which party to align himself with.

He said: "I used to be a union member when I worked in the civil service so I never felt comfortable voting Tory, and in recent years I've not felt comfortable voting Labour either.

"I found the option of the residents' association an attractive one and I voted for them before I joined as a councillor. I'm not sure how much influence I'll be able to have, but it'll be fun finding out. I'm hoping that while remaining independent I'll still be able to work well with councillors from the main parties.

"Just from spending a couple of days at County Hall I've realised the issues faced by the people of Swanscombe and Greenhithe are the same as those faced by people throughout Kent, such as the state of the roads and paths.

"They may seem like relatively simple problems, but they can have a real impact on the whole community."

Bank employee's salary is doubled, by mistake

IT'S the stuff dreams are made of – a bank worker is mistakenly paid double her usual wages, and then a court rules she can keep the cash.

And she can keep on collecting the overpayment, too.

Barclays worker Natasha Keenan was amazed to discover she had been paid too much, and then fought tooth and nail to hold on it to.

Astonishingly, she has now won her case and will be kept on at work at the new higher rate.

Mrs Keenan took the matter to an employment tribunal after her bosses, who had realised the overpayment, cut her pay in half just days before Christmas.

The bank also wanted back the £20,000 in wages already paid to her. But Mrs Keenan, a mother of two, was having none of it.

Now a tribunal has ruled the part-time complaints advisor can hang on to the cash, as it was the bank's fault in the first place.

By CHRIS MURPHY
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

The 36-year-old will continue to receive £19,246-a-year for working 19 hours a week at the bank's offices in Dartford, following the conclusion of the hearing which started in April. Her actual pay should be around the £9,500-a-year mark.

Employment tribunal chairman Martin Kurrein said: "I am confident that if Mrs Keenan had known Barclays had made a mistake, she would have informed them."

Mrs Keenan, who lives in nearby Erith, is delighted, and backed the tribunal's ruling

She said: "If I had realised they'd made a mistake with my salary, which could be spotted at any time, I wouldn't have put my family's future at risk and used it to apply for a mortgage.

"I certainly wouldn't have asked Barclays for a reference.

"I have repeatedly allowed Barclays staff access to my account.

"I clearly stated my salary when I applied for a Barclaycard.

"My manager and team leader must have known what I was getting paid."

Barclays is less than impressed with the outcome. A spokesman said: "We have no further comment at this stage as the decision and its impact remains a confidential matter between the bank and its employee.

"However we can confirm that Mrs Keenan remains a valued employee of the company."

The bank has already withdrawn its demand for the £20,000.

The tribunal had been told she was spending the windfall and even used her inflated pay slips to apply for a mortgage on the three-bedroom house she shares with husband Brent, 31, and their children Leo, four, and 14-month-old Sunny.

She is now expecting another child.

Landlord fined over fire risks

A LANDLORD has been fined £1,550 for failing to ensure his property was fire safe.

Jawid Sied, of Northdown Road in Cliftonville, was prosecuted at Margate Magistrates' Court on Thursday, where he pleaded guilty to contravening Article 31 of the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005.

Kent Fire and Rescue Service said the fine was for failing to ensure fire safety measures were in place at a property in Northdown Road he was renting to multiple occupants.

John Pereira, the service's head of technical fire safety, said: "We welcome the size of the penalty as this sends a message to landlords across the county that they must take fire safety seriously or we will prosecute them.

"We are currently working with Mr Sied to ensure the property in question is brought up to the required standards."

COSTLY: Tertius Wharton's parents have been paying £5,000-a-term, while the council has instead shelled out to keep open a place for him at a different school

School place scandal 'is an irrational waste of cash'

By JENNA PUDELEK
jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

"INCOMPETENT and a scandalous waste of taxpayers' money" is a mother's judgement on Kent County Council over its handling of her dyslexic son's schooling.

Tertius Wharton, 17, has been attending the progressive £5,000-a-term Summerhill School for six years, but the authority has insisted the school is not suitable for him and instead continued to pay out fees totalling £87,000 for a special school place near Sevenoaks.

His mother Joy Wharton, from Wouldham near Rochester, said: "I think Kent's actions have been irrational, duplicitous, incompetent and on occasions, malicious.

"No-one other than Kent disputes the suitability of Summerhill for Tertius and the progress he has made. The waste of taxpayers' money is nothing short of a scandal."

After a long-running battle, the family took the case to judicial review at London's High Court after securing legal aid. The case was heard last Thursday, and is now awaiting the judge's ruling.

The Whartons can no longer afford to pay out the fees for Summerhill in Suffolk where Tertius has been a boarder, and want KCC to pay for the teenager's final year.

But the authority is refusing to pay the fees unless Tertius, who has ADHD and dyslexia and is about to sit his International GCSEs, moves to The New School in West Heath.

Jonathan Shaw, disabilities minister and MP for Chatham and Aylesford, is supporting the family. He said: "I think it is a regrettable waste of public money. Summerhill was very satisfactory and significantly cheaper than what was proposed in Sevenoaks. I think it was more about winning the argument than what was best for Tertius and the taxpayer."

Best interest

Mrs Wharton said: "The fact that Kent want to effectively force Tertius to move to West Heath, which is no doubt a good school but one with a completely different ethos, and during his GCSE year, would have been traumatic for any child let alone one with special educational needs.

"This makes a total mockery of Kent's claim that they have always been acting in 'the best interests of the child'. They should be ashamed of themselves."

She said her son was about 10 when it was decided he needed more support than a mainstream school could offer.

He risked being excluded for his behavioural problems. Mrs Wharton said she had been aware of Summerhill, which was founded by Alexander Sutherland Neill, a pioneer of democratic or 'free' schooling.

In 2003, KCC refused to name Summerhill on Tertius' statement of SEN, which is his statutory right to a certain level of support that local authorities must provide, such as a place at a special school. Kent education bosses named The New School, which is owned by Mohamed Al Fayed and is where Diana, Princess of Wales, went.

The family appealed against the decision after Tertius attended the school for 10 days to see if he liked it. But the SEN and Disability Tribunal refused their claim.

After a second appeal failed, Mrs Wharton said: "We carried on struggling to pay the fees and continued to watch Tertius thrive and blossom at Summerhill."

After his father's business suffered in the economic downturn, Tertius won legal aid to take his case to the High Court.

Mrs Wharton added: "Even if we lose we had the satisfaction of the judge stating that Summerhill has delivered a good education for Tertius in the light of his needs, and we were genuinely acting at all times in the best interests of our son. That meant a lot to us."

Asked why he believes Summerhill worked for him, Tertius said: "It was the freedom of it. It is a really nurturing place teaching people to be themselves instead of fitting into roles like the state system. All the people from when they leave are so empathetic, it is one of the main things about Summerhill."

He talked about being part of a community and respected and not judged by teachers.

"I don't feel upset, I just think there are a lot of other kids in the same situation as me... That is what gives me the will to fight on."

Labour minister Mr Shaw added: "That money could have been put to good use elsewhere. I hope they have recognised that at the local authority and that they will think before this happens again. It is a shocking waste of public money."

A KCC spokeswoman said: "Because the case is under judicial consideration in the High Court we would not wish to make a statement at this time."

Driver is charged in road rage case

A MAN has been charged with criminal damage and common assault after an alleged incident in St Peter's Road, Margate, this month.

A woman was left shaken after a man allegedly got out of his car, shouted obscenities and kicked and punched her vehicle.

Paul Miller, 43, of Grosvenor Gardens, Margate, was arrested and charged on Thursday. He is due to appear at Margate court on Thursday, July 2.

Det Con Sara Jackson is investigating and would still like to speak with anybody who witnessed the alleged incident, which took place at about 5.45pm on Thursday, June 4.

They can email 9327@kent.pnn.police.uk, or call 01843 222067. Alternatively call Kent Crimestoppers in confidence on 0800 555 111.

Court skirmish ends with arrest

AN ATTACK on a defendant at Sittingbourne Magistrates Court on Wednesday has led to a man being arrested.

Police said the 38-year-old was arrested on suspicion of assault and affray after an incident inside the court building at 9.40am.

He was questioned by officers in custody at Sittingbourne police station.

LOCALLY GROWN: Sean Figgis is growing his uncle's new variety of strawberry in Faversham

Farm's berry own variety is a tasty hit

A NEW variety of strawberry developed in Kent is going on sale in the South East as part of a supermarket's plan to stock local produce on its shelves.

By CHRIS MURPHY
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

Peter Vinson, 65, has worked with soft fruits all his life and is widely regarded as one of the UK's best breeders of new varieties.

His nephew Sean Figgis then grows them on 200 of the 600 acres they have spread across four farms in the Faversham area.

Now supermarket giant Tesco has agreed to put the new variety, called Sweet Eve, on its shelves until October.

It said the demand for locally grown strawberries and other produce means it has searched for the best suppliers around the UK.

Mr Figgis runs Edward Vinson Ltd, which has been farming for five generations.

His uncle has handed over the running of the farm to focus his attention on developing new strawberry varieties, along with other fruits like raspberries and blueberries.

What started as a hobby 22 years ago has turned into a major growing programme supplying nine million strawberry plants to the industry every year.

Sweet Eve is an 'everbearer' variety, which means it will continue to fruit all summer long.

The berries are characterised by their intense flavour, aroma and sweetness, and are a true Kent strawberry having been bred, propagated and grown in the county.

The strawberries are currently priced at £1.99 for 454g in Tesco stores throughout the region, and can be identified by new labels.

Mr Figgis said: "These are special because they are incredibly sweet. They are firm on the outside, but inside they are very, very sweet.

"We feel, and consumer testing has proved, this is one of the best strawberries available.

"This is the first year there have been enough to sell to supermarkets. Before that it was just grown for tasting.

"They have been bred in Faversham by my uncle who is extremely busy on new varieties.

"He is never satisfied and always wants to get something that is a little bit better and is Britain's foremost breeder.

"We want to sell locally as it is better for the environment. It doesn't make sense sending our fruit to Scotland and they send theirs down here."

The 38-year-old said they produce 1,900 tonnes of strawberries each year on the 200 acres, and hopes that will rise by about 10 per cent year on year on the back of these new varieties.

He said: "We also grow about 120 tonnes of raspberries, and some blueberries now which will be sold locally, and the rest is corn and fallow ground and about 30 acres for trials for the new varieties."

Festival is pick of the crop

THE season's first cherries from the world-famous Brogdale Farm in Faversham are ready, and have kick-started the 2009 season of heritage fruit.

The cherry has been around in the UK since AD46, and its many varieties will be celebrated in Kent at Britain's largest Cherry Festival at Brogdale Farm on July 11-12.

It will feature over 50 different varieties of cherries to taste and buy from the more than 300 varieties growing in the orchards.

Among the early varieties to ripen this year are Early Rivers – an early black variety raised from seed by Thomas Rivers, a Sawbridgeworth nurseryman.

It was first produced in 1872 and quickly became the best quality early black variety in commercial cultivation.

The Festival weekend will also include fruit identification and advice from experts, talks and demonstrations on planting a fruit garden, basic grafting demonstrations, planning and care of allotments, organic gardening and flower arranging.

Cherries can be used in cooking too, and live demonstrations with top Kent chef Scot Anderson will keep audiences enthralled.

There'll be tours of the orchards, a gundog display, produce and plant stalls, summer bar and BBQ, and events for children.

Brogdale is home to the largest fruit collection in the world.

Olympic support for charity race

GOLD medallist Jamie Staff will be waving the starting flag at the Lydden Bikeathon Kidz event today.

The fundraising ride will raise cash for the Leukaemia Research charity.

The sprint cyclist, who is from Ashford and won his medal the Beijing Olympics in 2008, said: "This is a great opportunity for families to get on their bikes and enjoy a fun, healthy day out while also raising money for charity.

"I really hope the bikeathon will inspire people to participate in cycling and sign up for this fantastic event."

The event at Lydden Race Circuit from 11am, is open to all ages from toddlers to adults. You can enter on the day from 10am.

Entry costs £3 if children register in advance or £5 if they enter on the day. Everyone who takes part receives a fundraising pack, colouring in activity booklet and a T-shirt, plus an Olympic-style medal.

For more details about Lydden Bikeathon Kidz go to www.bikeathonkidz.co.uk.

Push to get more disabled people into the workplace

By JENNA PUDELEK
jenna.pudelek@kosmedia.co.uk

MORE than 35,000 people with a learning disability live in Kent – but only 17 per cent of them are in employment.

Helping more people with a learning disability into work is a key part of the Government's Valuing People Now strategy, which is aimed at ensuring choices, rights, independence and inclusion.

Liz Turner, support officer at Kent Supported Employment, which helps people with disabilities find jobs, said: "It is about people being treated equally.

"A big part of our work is educating employers about learning disabilities so they can see what people can contribute to the workplace."

Michael Catt, 44, has a learning disability and has been working for Kent Supported Employment, which is part of Kent County Council, for 18 years.

"I started out doing a lot of outside jobs and now I'm getting more office work," he said. "I enjoy the admin work. I enjoy meeting people and helping out other teams. Also I bump into some real characters, which is a bit of a laugh."

Mr Catt, who lives with his parents in East Peckham, has worked his way up from sweeping car parks at the offices to become an admin assistant. He carries out a range of tasks including checking emails, using the franking machine, archiving and handing out the post.

More support

Ms Turner, who works in the same building, said: "There are 165 people in this building and everybody knows Michael.

"It sounds a bit trite, but he really does add something to people's daily lives."

Mr Catt now wants to spend some of his wages on a supported holiday: "I want to go somewhere in England, not abroad, because my mum and dad have never been abroad. If I didn't work I would still be at the day centre. I prefer being at work because it gives me more freedom."

Ben Middleton, 17, from Dymchurch, has a learning disability and works part-time as a cleaner at Folkestone Academy while also attending South Kent College.

His job has changed his life, he said. "I can do stuff I have never been able to do before."

Ms Turner said: "It is about being part of something, like everyone else; socialising, meeting people and demonstrating skills as good as anyone else's, although they will need a bit more support."

She said employers were becoming more open to hiring people with learning disabilities, but often did not realise they could get Government funding to support them.

Other examples of people with learning disabilities who have been supported into work include Beth, who wanted to work with children. Ms Turner said she was now a volunteer at Pembury library during baby 'rhyme time' and at a toddlers' group.

Luke Woodcock gained an NVQ in hospitality and now works in a paid role at the Holiday Inn, Ashford, as a food and beverage assistant in the hotel bar and restaurant.

His mother Maureen said: "Since he started in June, 2008, we have noticed how much confidence he has gained. He enjoys and benefits from working to earn his own money."

KCC's adult social services team has contact will only 3,500 people with learning disabilities in the county. Dee Watson, KCC's Valuing People Now development manager, said: "Not all people who meet the criteria for support from social services have made themselves known, as they rely on family and close friends for support. This is especially true in ethnic minority communities.

"People with learning disabilities are one of the most disadvantaged groups of jobseekers.

"Recent studies have shown that about 17 per cent of people with learning disabilities have employment, and of these very few have full-time work."

This coming week (Monday to Sunday, June 22-28) is Learning Disability Week. For more information, go to www.mencap.org.uk.

MORE than 70 per cent of motorists driving through a Shepway village have been speeding, close to a school.

Neighbourhood officer PC Trevor Moody has been carrying out checks on Bossingham Road, outside Stelling Minnis Primary School, after parents raised concerns. Over a four-day period, 243 vehicles were monitored and 178 were over the 30mph limit.

PC Moody will share the results with councillors with a view to getting the 30mph sign repositioned so drivers can slow down in time. Speeding has been raised previously as an issue of concern at police surgeries.

'Gent' Calvin leads assault on charts

By STEVE KNIGHT
steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

A MUSIC management firm that lists chart-topper Calvin Harris among its clients has secured another major record deal.

Three Six Zero Group, which has roots in Kent, has grown considerably and now looks after the careers of established stars as well as a host of young up-and-comers.

Canadian record producer Deadmau5 – real name Joel Zimmerman – is the firm's latest success story, having just signed a £1 million deal with EMI Music's Virgin label.

Former golf professional Andy Rutherford, 36, from West Malling, co-founded Three Six Zero with his friend Dean Wilson, 39, from Maidstone, and told Kent on Sunday he was delighted with the firm's growth.

He said: "It all started about 10 years ago as a hobby but one day we sat down and agreed to knuckle down and give it a real go and we haven't looked back. We have a great team who work extremely hard and to have acts that are breaking into the charts is just great.

"Now we want to continue to represent our clients as well as possible and help them become successful around the world."

Also home to the respected French DJ Fred Falke, Three Six Zero's hottest commodity is undoubtedly Calvin Harris. The 25-year-old Scot released his first album, I Created Disco, in 2007 and has since had two number ones, while also having worked with the likes of Kylie Minogue and Dizzee Rascal.

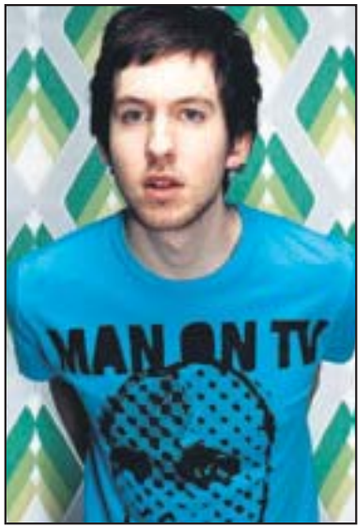
NOW HEAR THIS: Andy Rutherford and Dean Wilson (back row, third and fourth left respectively) with staff and artists, including Deadmau5 (seated, centre)

Mr Rutherford said Harris deserved the fame he had achieved.

He said: "It's all happened so quickly for him and he's now working on his second album, but he's an absolute gent. He works so hard every single day and is not the type to attend glamorous parties.

"He's really seizing the moment and enjoying every minute of it, and there are now offers coming in from artists around the world who want to work with him.

"Our co-director Mark Gillespie discovered Calvin on MySpace and came to us saying he really liked his sound, and we're obviously very pleased he did."



GREAT SCOT: Three Six Zero's chart-topping dance musician Calvin Harris

Now based in London, Three Six Zero still has an office in Sevenoaks and is looking to expand across the world to increase the opportunities available to its clients.

Mr Rutherford said: "We invest in artists we believe in before they're even close to signing a deal.

"We've financed their promos, developed software and created iPhone applications that have gone Top 10 internationally.

"We're slowly penetrating the whole market. It's quite simple – we want to be the best we can."

Duck drained by the excitement

TAKING a duck to water sounds easy, but the process can become quite arduous when a duckling drops down a drain.

So it was lucky when company boss Ben McGannan – ironically he is the managing director of Water for Work and Home – noticed the tiny creature's distress. When Mr McGannan arrived at work in Marden to unload a van, he noticed a duckling with an agitated mother duck in the yard.

The birds were clearly distressed, so he gave them food and water, which calmed the mother down.

However, the duckling soon waddled off and fell down a storm drain in the yard.

Peering down into the drain, Mr McGannan was stunned to see the rest of the duck's brood peering up at him. Kent Fire and Rescue Service was alerted and sent a crew out to deal with the ducklings. They lifted off the hefty drain cover and scooped out the 14 ducklings.

After some relay work to a local reservoir, the mother was soon reunited with her entire family.

YARD BIRDS: Mum and baby ducks

TO THE RESCUE: Fire crew in action

SAFE AT LAST: Back at the reservoir

Mr McGannan said: "We always stress the importance of hydration to employers and their staff, but it was quite unusual to find a dehydrated duck in our yard.

"But with the fantastic response from the fire service we were able to get the ducklings back to their natural habitat without too much stress."

Fire crew manager Julian Hartley said: "It was the most unusual shout I've ever been on. When we got there we found the ducklings stuck two feet down the drain, so we prised the cover off with crowbars, and scooped them out. Unfortunately the mother had flown off, so it took half an hour to reunite them at the reservoir. But when we did it was a heartmelting moment."

The growing popularity of internet and social networking

Life is tweet for public services

LOG ON: The internet revolution is changing the way we live in Kent

By STEVE KNIGHT
steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

ONCE regarded as the exclusive domain of trendy students, social networking websites could soon play an important role in all our lives.

With Facebook now home to more than 200 million users and Twitter the fastest-growing site in the world, public bodies such as Kent County Council and Kent Police have had little choice but to come up with ways to get involved.

The end result could see us accessing important information like never before, whether viewing CCTV footage of a wanted criminal on YouTube, or getting to know election candidates better on Bebo.

KCC chief executive Peter Gilroy told Kent on Sunday he felt it was "vital" public bodies kept up with the internet boom, especially during the recession.

He said: "There is absolutely no doubt websites is changing the way we communicate with politicians, the police and each other we will have a serious downturn in public expenditure across the board and we will have to find alternative ways to communicate with people.

"The world is changing and we must take that very seriously indeed. I sometimes feel we waste money on publications because they go through letterboxes and in most cases end up in the bin 30 seconds later.

"Now is the time to come up with creative ways of using these websites for the benefit of us all. It's possible that all council services will eventually be available online."

FUTURE: Peter Gilroy

Last month's emergency at Minster College on the Isle of Sheppey – where a roof collapsed, injuring students – demonstrated how useful a website like Twitter can be in relaying information.

In a series of 'tweets' posted by KCC's communications team, parents were given updates about what was happening at the school and whether or not they had cause for concern about their own children.

The Liberal Democrat group on the council is also aware of Twitter's growing popularity. One of the first things the party announced after its recent elections success was that it had signed up to the service.

Lib Dem Cllr Tim Prater said: "Twitter is another way people can engage with us, give us their thoughts, suggestions and problems. It doesn't replace any other way of talking with people – it adds to them.

"We are committed to listening to people and Twitter gives us another way of doing that, as well as keeping people in touch with what we are doing at County Hall and across Kent."

CONTACT: Derek Wyatt

With just 14 people signed up as 'fans' to Kent Police's official Facebook page, the force admits it is still in the early stages of developing its web strategy but that it was learning from other constabularies.

One site it has had success with so far is YouTube, where a fireworks safety demonstration posted in November received a million hits.

A spokesman said: "As more people are turning to the internet we must ensure we are also using those resources.

"Advances in technology mean we have an increased number of ways in which we can communicate, but we want to get it right rather than rush into the latest trend.

"So far we have created Kent Police pages on Facebook and YouTube and we look forward to increasing our presence on the internet, making us more accessible."

ONLINE: KCC, Kent Police and Sittingbourne MP Derek Wyatt all have a web presence

As co-chairman of the all-party communications group in the Commons, Sittingbourne and Sheppey MP Derek Wyatt is no novice when it comes to the internet. His championing of the world wide web has earned him awards and at 59 he is living proof it is never too late to get to grips with a computer. Mr Wyatt said sites like Facebook and Twitter made it easier for constituents to keep in contact with him and the opportunities for both public and private sector bodies were limitless.

He said: "About two months ago I spent a morning teaching charity workers how to use certain websites and they couldn't believe how simple it was. Everyone will need to get online at some point because the industry is so huge now and people are in danger of being left behind. I receive regular reports as to how many people visit my official website and how many go to my social networking pages, and it's the latter that seem to attract the most.

"Social networking sites are a way of humanising the internet and have changed the way we communicate with one another."

Back at County Hall, Mr Gilroy said it was important the people who make decisions today are fully prepared for the future.

"My grandson was barely five when I bought him a Nintendo Wii and I was only out of the room for five minutes before he had connected it up to the television," he said. "I then played him at tennis and he thrashed me. Even people in their late 20s were not taught that much about the internet or computers at school so it's still relatively new, but it's here to stay and will become even more prolific."

MP Ann would make a meal of Parliament

By STEVE KNIGHT
steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

ANN Widdecombe will still be a hero in at least one woman's eyes should she fail to become Speaker of the House of Commons.

The Conservative MP for Maidstone and the Weald will find out tomorrow if she has been chosen to replace Michael Martin, who quit the job last month in the fallout of the expenses scandal.

Regardless of how she gets on, Miss Widdecombe will no doubt still be idolised by fellow Kent resident Jane Wenham-Jones after the popular author nominated her for inclusion in the new Help for Heroes cookbook.

The book – proceeds from which will go towards helping wounded Armed Forces personnel – sees a range of well-known personalities explaining who they would cook for and why.

Broadstairs resident Ms Wenham-Jones wrote: "My hero is definitely Ann Widdecombe, which has nothing to do with her politics and is all about the conviction she exudes.

"With her foghorn vowels and wonderful aura of 'matron knows best', she's an abiding constant in an uncertain world.

"Not for her woolly replies like 'I'm not sure' or 'I've never thought about that'.

"She is the ship of belief sailing majestically across the wish-wash of political correctness, tossing the namby-pamby aside in her wake.

"I particularly love her when she makes mincemeat of interviewers by disregarding their questions and only answering her own. Normally known for my gobbiness, I was reduced in the three seconds I was in her presence to gush and blush."

Success

Despite being rejected countless times in her quest for a publisher, Ms Wenham-Jones has found success with a range of humorous novels since 1995, as well as more than 100 short stories for women's magazines.

Miss Widdecombe, who will give up her seat at the next general election, told MPs ahead of tomorrow's secret vote for a new Speaker that she had the "vulgar attributes" to help Parliament reconnect with the public.

Were Ms Wenham-Jones to concoct a meal for her hero, she said she would provide her with egg-mayonnaise sandwiches, hand-fried crisps and a bottle of champagne.

Miss Widdecombe told Kent on Sunday the meal would be "fine for a non-slimming day", adding: "I'm extremely flattered and look forward to reading about it."

Meanwhile, South Thanet Labour MP Dr Stephen Ladyman also contributed to the cookbook and selected Donald Campbell – the only man to set land and water speed records in the same year.

He said: "I chose Donald Campbell because, as a boy, he was my ultimate hero.

"When it dawned on me after the Bluebird crashed on Coniston Water that he was mortal like the rest of us, my admiration for the way he lived only increased."

The cookbook can be purchased from www.foodforheroes.co.uk and all good booksellers, priced £14.95.

WIN a holiday for a hero

P&O Ferries

WHEN the going gets tough, you can still afford to get going, courtesy of the P&O Ferries Local Heroes Campaign.

Who do you know that gives up lots of their time to help others? Is there someone who is a community champion in your local area? Is it a hard working mum or dad who runs a sports club? Or a fundraiser who's tireless efforts raise money for local causes?

P&O Ferries are offering you the chance to nominate a local hero (and their family) – someone you believe truly deserves a holiday as a result of their hardwork and dedication to an important cause, person or club.

Let us know who's hard work and dedication deserves a holiday, and thanks to P&O Ferries' Local Heroes campaign the winning family will be transported from Dover to Calais courtesy of P&O Ferries and then on to Belle Dunne Holiday resort. For more details see www.poferries.com. For more information about P&V Holidays see www.pv-holidays.com.

For the chance to nominate your local hero for this amazing prize, please tell us (in a maximum of 100 words) who you believe is most deserving of this holiday and why.

Answers are to be sent to P&O Holiday Competition, Apple Barn, Hythe Road, Smeeth, Ashford, Kent TN25 6SR.

The closing date is July 3rd, 2009.

No purchase necessary. For full terms and conditions see www.kentnews.co.uk, or call 01303 817073. If you do not wish to receive any literature write 'no literature' on your entry. The prizes are 'self drive' holidays, therefore winners have to have their own car to get them there. The prizes are subject to availability and exclude peak holiday periods.

Hotel terms and conditions: 1. The prize is for a seven-night holiday in a studio or one bedroom apartment for four people. 2. No cash alternative will be offered and the prize is non-transferable. 3. The prize is valid one year from the closing date of the competition and is subject to availability and excludes certain dates. 4. Insurance is not included. 5.Winner will be bound by P&V's booking condition, for full terms and conditions, visit www.pv-holidays.com. 6. The promoter is P&V, 11 rue de Cambrai, 75109 Paris, France. See website for full terms and conditions.

Firefighters save two from blaze

FIREFIGHTERS rescued two people from a burning house in Northfleet early on Tuesday evening.

Both were treated by ambulance staff who also attended the blaze in Marks Square, which had started at about 5.45pm and was tackled by crew members from four fire engines.

The cause of the fire, which was extinguished by 6.20pm, is not yet known.

Academy tunes in

A NEW community radio station is to be launched in Folkestone after winning approval from media regulator Ofcom.

Christened Academy FM, the station will broadcast from Folkestone Academy 24 hours a day after gaining a five-year licence.

A similar scheme under the Academy FM banner also has also the go-ahead at the Marlowe Academy in Ramsgate.

Ofcom first launched its community radio licence five years ago, allowing small-scale, not-for-profit organisations to broadcast to specific communities or the wider public.

Fraud charges

THIRTEEN people facing charges of conspiracy to defraud a tour operator of around £235,000 will enter their pleas to the charges in September.

The initial arrests were made in relation to attempts to defraud Thomas Cook in October last year. The accused appeared at Maidstone Crown Court on Monday after they were charged with fraud in April this year. All but one are from Kent.

They will reappear at the court on September 14 for a plea and case management hearing.

EVENING COURSES: Carpentry and Joinery

Starting in September, South Kent College, Folkestone campus is offering 2 construction woodwork evening courses.

BEFORE AND AFTER: (Left) Reculver before the village was moved and (right) the site today with just the church's two towers remaining

Remembering the village that was falling into the sea

THE relocation of an entire village to prevent it toppling over a cliff is to be celebrated as part of a special anniversary exhibition.

By STEVE KNIGHT
steve.knight@kosmedia.co.uk

Kent Wildlife Trust is holding the event to mark 200 years since Reculver, near Herne Bay, was taken down and rebuilt away from the rapidly-eroding cliff's edge.

The conservation charity is also appealing for anyone with historic photographs, press cuttings or memories of the village since its move, to help contribute to the exhibition, which takes place next month.

Community education officer Julie Thomsett will be available at the event to recount the fascinating tale of the original Reculver – the last remaining remnants of which are the twin towers of a ruined 12th century church.

She said: "About 200 years ago the village was getting dangerously close to the edge of the cliff, which was eroding at a rate of about one metre a year.

"The people who lived here knew they had to do something or else everything they owned would fall into the sea, so they called a meeting and decided to move everything brick by brick.

"They loaded it all up in barrows and carts and took the entire village further inland to where it is now.

"The only thing they left was the church because they were told its tall towers and its position on the edge of the cliff made it an important shipping landmark.

"It was bought by (the lighthouse authority) Trinity House for about £100 and they put coastal defences around it, although today it's owned by English Heritage."

The Celebration of Reculver event will be held at Kent Wildlife Trust's newly-refurbished visitor centre in Reculver Country Park, between 10am and 4pm on Sunday, July 12.

As well as the collection of old photographs and press cuttings, there will also be information stalls about coastal erosion and renewable energy, as well as guided walks through the park.

Mrs Thomsett said: "There are probably lots of people out there with interesting stories about Reculver to tell.

"Two hundred years is a long time, but I spoke to one elderly man recently who told me his grandparents were married in the original Reculver church, so there are still memories of the old village.

"In 1999, millions of pounds were spent on the latest coastal defences here, so we shouldn't have to move it all again in the foreseeable future."

Anyone who would like to contribute to the exhibition can call Mrs Thomsett direct on 07747 474361 or email julie.thomsett@kentwildlife-.org.uk.

UFO seen after night at party

A 'JELLYFISH' UFO has been spotted over the county town.

The sighting was logged on a popular flying saucer website by someone calling themselves TL, and is backed by another witness called Diane Yarwood, both agree it was spotted on June 13 at just after 10pm.

TL wrote: "We'd just left a party, myself, hubby and our two teenagers, not far from the centre of Maidstone.

"Hubby was driving and I saw what I thought was a really bright plane light moving towards the town. It was bright orange and almost 'glowing' – but the movement seemed odd for a plane.

"We all tried to watch it, but houses blocked some of the view... As the kids and I turned to see where it had gone, another one rose behind. It was either much larger or closer – from the direction of the town. It moved in such a strange way, vertical where the first seemed to be travelling horizontally.

"It reminded us of a jellyfish but without the 'tendrils' hanging down. We've never seen anything like it... They didn't move like anything I've seen before and the colour almost seemed to glow from within. I'd be interested to know what they were. I've never believed in UFOs... and still don't but this has baffled me!"

Diane Yarwood added that she saw something similar: "Saw two orange lights 10.30ish coming from Maidstone over Oakwood Park, Tonbridge Road, from my home heading south.

"Went outside they had disappeared but as I looked over towards Tonbridge Road 12-14 orange lights came from south east and disappeared went back inside and told my partner he came out saw them too."

Horse makes a point of jabs

DUKE, the country's biggest horse, has been given his annual tetanus jab to raise awareness of National Vaccination Month.

The six-year-old Shire horse, who is 20.1 hands high, or 6ft 9ins, and lives at The Horse Refuge near Tenterden, is one of three fighting for the honour of being the world's tallest.

Sara Ross, Duke's owner, said: "Despite being scared of mice and not liking the rain, Duke was very brave when it came to the injection – clearly he understands this really could be a life-saving jab."

National Vaccination Month is a campaign to encourage pet owners to get their animals inoculated to help stamp out killer diseases.

Vets who have signed up to the drive will be offering a full vaccination course for the price of a booster throughout June.

Just under half of pets in the South East are unvaccinated or overdue immunisations and 64 per cent of people polled blamed the cost.

A spokeswoman for the campaign said research shows that a rising number of vets are reporting an increase in a several serious and deadly diseases across the South East.

"One of the growing threats in leptospirosis, which is carried by the rapidly rising rat population," she said.

"The disease, which is transmitted through rats' urine and can be picked up by dogs as they swim in rivers, or even drink from puddles, is often fatal."

The figures show cat flu was treated by 87 per cent of vets in the country, making it the most common feline disease.

Climate change means fleas and other insect carriers of the infamous rabbit killer myxomatosis are surviving longer and extending the period of risk in the summer.

Duke was vaccinated against tetanus, which is a bacteria found in soil. It often proves fatal in horses and can infect even the smallest wounds.

Kate Humble, the BBC wildlife and science presenter who is spearheading the campaign, added: "The aim is to help save lives and limit the spread of disease by offering pet owners the chance to vaccinate at a discounted rate.

"If your dog or cat has not been vaccinated in the last 18 months, the last nine months for rabbits or the last 12 months for horses, visit our website."

Show puts you in prison

PEOPLE who have always wondered what goes on behind the walls of Maidstone Prison can delve into its past at a newly opened exhibition.

The Within the Walls exhibition at Maidstone Museum in St Faith's Street charts the history of the prison since it first opened in the town centre 190 years ago, up until the present day.

The exhibition is a celebration of the prison's role in the community and a chance for Maidstone residents to have a glimpse at what has been on their doorstep since 1819.

Maidstone and Weald MP Ann Widdecombe, a former prisons minister, officially opened the exhibition on Saturday.

The idea for Within the Walls is to focus on the prison's important relationship with the community and to show visitors how it generates revenue for business and remains a cultural icon for the county town.

The prison has evolved since the 1800s, recently becoming a specialised sex offender unit with a smaller section for foreign prisoners – housing about 600 inmates in total.

Prison governor Stephen O'Connell said: "The history of Maidstone Prison reads like a history of the British penal system through the years of public execution, deportation and the reform movement of the late 1800s.

"Throughout the 1900s Maidstone has played its part in the development of the modern Prison Service and has housed many infamous prisoners.

"Most Maidstone citizens will regularly pass the prison but know little about it or what goes on inside. This exhibition aims to change that by opening up both our history and present day to the Maidstone public."

The exhibition runs until July 26.

Crime writer asks for readers to help him make a killing

A CRIME author is drumming up public support for his thriller Garden of Evil in the hope it will win the genre's 'Oscar'.

David Hewson is up against 13 other major crime titles in the battle for the Theakstons Old Peculier Crime Novel of the Year Award.

He told Kent on Sunday: "The call came out of the blue and I have to say I am delighted to have been chosen to take part.

"I understand the public gets to vote for the winner, so I would urge everyone to vote for the Garden of Evil.

"I am up against some stiff opposition, but I am getting emails from people around the world saying they are going to vote for me, which is wonderful."

The award is backed by supermarket giant Asda, and Hewson, from Wye, was at the Ashford branch last week for a photo opportunity and to back his book.

Hewson is up against some of the biggest names in crime writing, including Rebus creator Ian Rankin, Reginald Hill for the latest Dalziel and Pascoe book, Jack Reacher author Lee Child, and Val McDermid.

This is the seventh time the Old Peculier Crime Novel of the Year Award has been run, and it highlights the very best in crime writing.

The winner will eventually be presented with £3,000 and a handcrafted Theakstons Old Peculier cask on the opening night of Theakstons Old Peculier Crime Writing Festival on July 23, hosted by radio broadcaster, Mark Lawson.

Garden of Evil is the sixth of Hewson's novels set in Rome to feature his fictional detective Nic Costa.

To vote for Hewson, or anyone else on the shortlist, visit www.theakstons.co.uk.

Ill Harry is a guest of honour at Grand Prix

By CHRIS MURPHY
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A CASUAL game of football four years ago has sentenced a teenager to years of pain and anguish after his tibia was eaten away by a serious condition.

But to help put a smile on Harry Kenneally's face during his recovery, he will be a special guest at the British Grand Prix today, and may even get to meet racing stars like Jenson Button or Lewis Hamilton.

Harry, 14, was struck down by osteofibrosis dysplasia in November, 2005.

The disease affects the growth and development of bones – and Harry's hopes of a sporting life have been shattered.

His mother Louisa, 43, who is a full-time carer for Harry, said at her home in Margate: "It was only a little knock during a game of football.

"He took a bang to the shin, and a bruise came up. We thought nothing more of it, but then it seemed to get worse and worse, and eventually he was told he had osteofibrosis dysplasia.

"It has changed his life both physically and mentally because he loved all sports and was out on his bike a lot.

"From having all that to nothing is a major shock."

But now it will be full speed ahead for the Great Ormond Street Hospital patient who is a guest of honour of Formula One supremo Bernie Ecclestone at the British Grand Prix in Silverstone.

A year after his diagnosis, he had an operation to remove a 15cm section of his shinbone.

He has now been fitted with a frame that will stretch his leg until it is the same length as his other one.

Every day he has to turn the screws to make it longer, causing agonising pain in his leg.

Louisa said: "He is not doing so well at the moment. The bone is not bonding together as it should near his ankle.

"He is all done up again in plaster which means he can get around for a little while on crutches, but he is so looking forward to going to Silverstone with his aunt Gill McDermott."

Harry has an 'access all areas' pass and can watch the race from his VIP seat. He will also have the chance to go into some of the team garages.

If time is on his side, he will also get to meet some of the drivers and team bosses and perhaps even get behind the wheel of an F1 car.

Louisa said: "We are really excited and pleased he is going again. He went last year and loved it.

"He is a big F1 fan, so this is a dream for Harry."

STARS: Strictly Come Dancing's Tess Daly, ill Harry Kenneally, and Beat the Star presenter Vernon Kay at the racing

Traditional recipes to treat your dad with

Celebrity chef Richard Phillips brings us the latest in his series of articles backing our local food campaign

WITH the longest day coinciding with Father's Day this year, and thoughts turning to summer holidays and whether we will enjoy long lazy days basking in the sun or watch the rain falling endlessly from the sky, I thought it would be a good idea to have some recipes using traditional staple foods.

As the months pass from spring into summer and the basket from www.foodforkent.co.uk changes, it's great to see the impact of the changing seasons on the contents.

We can also see the diversity of what Kent has to offer and reflect on how it is easy to forget some of the joys which can come from foods that we often overlook or take for granted.

Right now we are getting some fabulous Dover sole and this can make a tasty meal when accompanied with fresh broad beans, peas and thinly sliced pancetta to bring out the subtle flavours of the fish.

Pancetta is simply pork belly which has been salt cured and dried for about three months and spiced with a variety of flavours such as garlic, fennel, and nutmeg and dried ground hot peppers.

It works ever so well with the fish and any pasta or casserole dish.

This recipe is quick and easy to prepare and one which would make the perfect Father's Day dish.

If you don't like Dover sole then you can substitute any flat fish for this recipe such as plaice, lemon sole or John Dory.

Last month we had strawberries in our basket and another unique-tasting British fruit is available in this month's: the gooseberry.

Gooseberries make a fantastic summer desert and can be the ideal complement to those warm summer evenings watching the sun go down.

The recipe is another classic, a gooseberry fool. The important thing to remember for this dish is to use nicely ripened gooseberries, but if you can't get hold of them fresh then frozen will suffice.

Both recipes are simple to make and will awaken your taste buds to a mixture of subtle and nostalgic flavours.

Range of flavours

The great thing about cooking for me, whether it is at one of my restaurants at Chapel Down, the Hengist, Thackeray's or even home, is ensuring I use everyday locally grown products where possible.

I am often amazed that customers are surprised by the delicacy and range of flavours; and yes, part of the reason for that success is in the preparation and use of complementary ingredients, but the freshness and quality of the produce is a huge factor.

Many people want to know how to recreate the dishes we serve and hopefully by providing these recipes it is a simple way to give you a chance to do this.

But for those of you who have been bitten by the cooking bug and want to know more, I run a couple of cookery schools.

These are great opportunities to show you how you can create stunning tasty meals for special occasions, as well as offering fantastic tips which you can use every day in your kitchen.

You can find out more information about the cookery schools and how to get involved by logging onto my website at www.richardphillipsatchapeldown.co.uk and clicking on the private cookery class button.

One of the classes may even make a fantastic Father's Day treat for your dad.

Hopefully many of you are now getting your fresh delivery from the guys at www.foodforkent.co.uk and some of you have even tried the recipes I have been writing about here.

I'd love to hear from you telling me about your cooking successes or failures, so please feel free to email me at richard.phillips@kosmedia.co.uk.

Also, if you have any food or cooking related questions and I'll definitely get back to you.

Richard Phillips

Pan fried fillets of Dover sole served with braised peas and pancetta

Serves 4
2 x med sized Dover sole, filleted x 4 pieces and skinned
400g fresh peas
200g fresh broad beans
Thinly sliced pancetta (cooked until crisp)
Pea cress to garnish
For the sauce
1 x banana shallot, finely chopped
150ml dry white wine
100g panchetta cut into lardons (small, chunky cubes)
Good pinch of chopped chervil (to finish)
25ml white wine vinegar
100ml double cream
Half a lemon

In a small sauté pan, warm up a little olive oil, add the diced shallot and cook with a little colour until tender.

Add the pancetta and cook until crisp and a golden brown colour is achieved, deglaze with the white wine and vinegar, and reduce by about two thirds.

Add the peas and broad beans, cook for 1-2 minutes, add the stock and cook for a further 5mins, then add the double cream and continue cooking until a sauce consistency is achieved (2-3mins), season. Add a squeeze of lemon juice and then add the chopped chervil.

Place the lightly floured sole fillets into a pre-heated non-stick pan, colour slightly then add a knob of butter and cook on both sides for 2-3mins until golden brown.

To serve place the peas in the centre of a bowl with the fish on top, spoon over the sauce and garnish with pea cress leaves and crisp pancetta.

Gooseberry fool

Serves 6
200g Fresh gooseberries
150g caster sugar
200ml double cream

Gently cook the gooseberries with 50g of the sugar, taking care that they do not go mushy. Set aside a little of the cooking juices. Whip the cream together with the remaining sugar

Divide the gooseberries between six glasses, spoon over the cream and drizzle with the reserved cooled cooking juices.

COMMENT

Church vandals a sad fact of life

WHEN a vicar says he would like to see the heads of the people who vandalised his church on stakes, you know he must be at the end of his tether.

Rev Jim Field spoke out after thieves stole £20,000 of lead from the roof of St George's in Ivychurch, Romney Marsh, and good for him.

While his gruesome view of the punishment the thieves should receive may not be to everybody's liking, few can argue he is within his rights to voice his anger over a crime that is perhaps crueller than many of a similar nature. Churches are not money-spinning enterprises and rely heavily on the work of volunteers so they can even be kept open.

Restorations to these historic buildings often cost thousands of pounds – money that is hard to come by at the best of times, without it being spent on replacing stolen lead.

As Loyd Grossman told Kent on Sunday this week, there will always be people who want to ruin churches for others by vandalising them. And perhaps that is the most worrying – and disappointing – fact of all.

Heroes' welcome

IF ANY further proof were needed of the huge public support for the Gurkhas, this week's parade in Folkestone was it.

The fact more than 10,000 people turned up on a Thursday morning to celebrate the soldiers being given the freedom of the town is remarkable, and shows the Government made the right decision by welcoming all former Gurkhas to the country. Congratulations again to all their campaigners have achieved.

OPINION: Salute to our fine heroes

Defence minister Kevan Jones sends a message of thanks to the county

EVERY day, men and women from across the south east of England risk their lives for the defence of our country.

It is only right and proper that we recognise their courage and show them the respect they deserve.

Later this month, events will take place in Chatham to mark the first annual Armed Forces Day on Saturday, June 27.

This will be an opportunity to honour not just those currently serving, but also the thousands of veterans to whom we owe a huge debt of gratitude for their role in securing our freedom.

It is vital for them to know that they have the support of their fellow citizens for the sacrifices they have made and continue to make.

This is the first time a day has been dedicated to all those who have served in the Army, Navy or Air Force, either full-time or as a reservist, and more than 200 events are taking place up and down the country.

At 10.30am on Monday, June 22, specially designed Armed Forces Day flags will be raised across Kent by local councils, schools, businesses and members of the public.

Similar ceremonies will take place at the same time, right across the UK, and the world, wherever men and women of our Armed Forces are deployed, so those serving abroad know that the whole country is supporting them in the vital challenges they face so professionally.

These flags, which are based on the Union Jack, will be flown all week, leading up to Armed Forces Day itself on Saturday 27.

On that day, across the county, the community will be celebrating its Armed Forces in unique ways. From Folkestone to Deal, from Bexleyheath to Tunbridge Wells, bands will play, field kitchens will be catering, veterans, cadets and returning service personnel from operations in Iraq and Afghanistan will be marching.

People right across the South East, and thousands across the UK, will say 'thank you' to our brave forces

The show of support is humbling indeed. Canterbury will witness a Highland games military spectacular; Biggin Hill's annual airshow will take on a new poignancy; while the national Armed Forces Day event at Chatham Historic Dockyard promises to be a splendid celebration as we commemorate the achievements of all our Armed Forces, past, present and future.

I am so grateful to the people of Kent who have organised events. It will mean a great deal, particularly to those serving this country today.

Last year, the Ministry of Defence launched the Service Personnel Command Paper to improve support for our forces community.

This initiative has doubled the compensation awarded to injured personnel, delivered better and fairer access to public services for those in the forces and established community mental health schemes to provide specialist treatment to veterans.

For the past year, I have worked with colleagues in other government departments to ensure that they are doing their utmost to support servicemen and women, their families and veterans.

I also continue to engage with many service charities and am grateful for their generosity and co-operation in ensuring that our forces are looked after in the best possible way.

Armed Forces Day is a chance for the British public to come out and show they too recognise the unique demands that are placed upon our forces community.

People right across the South East and thousands across the country will take this opportunity to say 'thank you' to our brave forces and I hope you will join us.

To find out more about Armed Forces Day and how you can get involved in the events, visit www.armedforcesday.org.uk.

Shut this website down

The gentleman (and I use the term loosely) who has seen fit to set up a website offering £10,000 to anyone who can provide photographic proof that the man found guilty of killing Lin and Megan Russell could not have been there at the time the crime took place is a callous fool (KoS, June 14).

Such insensitivity towards the feelings of Josie and Shaun Russell is a disgrace. Websites of this nature have no place on the internet.

They are designed purely to attract the prurient attention of disturbed individuals obsessed with murderers and serial killers.

If this man tormenting Shaun and Josie has one ounce of decency he should shut down his website immediately and spare the Russells any further suffering.

Clive Wilkins-Oppler, Canterbury

Stifled by conformity

Last week saw the publication of proposed reforms to home education practice.

The recommendations by Graham Badman to the Secretary of State call for local education authority (LEA) staff to have the power to approve or deny home educator provision by a family, with no right of appeal.

Interestingly enough, Mr Badman is a former chief of Kent children's services.

Currently an LEA, if it believes a family is not providing a suitable education, can take them to court, but the onus is on the LEA to make their case.

However, under the new provisions, those who educate in different, but valid, ways would no longer have the protection of the courts. This will affect Christian, Jewish, Muslim and other faith-based education, as well those who currently choose Steiner, Montessori, or Summerhill as alternative types of teaching.

Those whose family demographic does not appear suitable to the LEA for home education would also be prevented from doing so. It is surely unacceptable for the State to have ultimate control of the education of our children, and another example of the Government imposing more centralisation and conformity on our lives.

Dr Alan Bullion, Lib Dem parliamentary spokesman for Sevenoaks, Tunbridge Wells

Honour these old soldiers

I see in the Queen's Birthday Honours List there were no awards for Britain's last two World War One veterans, Henry Allingham and Harry Patch.

This is a pity as I think they deserve a CBE or MBE, or even a knighthood.

They have seen a lot and did a lot for this country during the Great War and are now aged 113 (Mr Allingham) and 111 (Mr Patch). I have met both gentlemen and they are in good health. I wish them well as they are special people

I think they should receive an award, as they will not be around for ever. I hope in time somebody will recognise their efforts and give them something. I wish them all the luck and the best for the future.

Christopher Sharp, Staplehurst

Privileged to serve you

I hope you will allow me to thank all those people from across the county, and from all political parties, who have sent me their good wishes and generous compliments following the declaration of the county council election results.

They are too many to respond to individually and it would be wrong to mention any one person by name here, but I have been touched by all their kind comments.

It is certainly gratifying to know that my "hard work, guidance and support" (their words, not mine) were so much appreciated by so many. But whatever hard work, guidance and support I may have been able to provide was the result of the dedication of the whole Kent Labour team at County Hall.

It has been a privilege to serve the people of Kent as a county councillor for so long and, although no longer able to work for the benefit of the whole county, I shall continue to do all I can for the people of Deal and Walmer.

Mike Eddy, Deal

Costs of congestion

One constant theme of my correspondence from Kent in recent months has been heavy goods vehicles movements.

China Gateway, Kent International Gateway (KIG), the lorry park proposed for Aldington and the more recent massive Borough Green proposals are all about accommodating more HGVs moving through Kent. Despite repeated urging, the Government has failed to apply charges on foreign HGVs, which it is entitled to do under European law. Due to inappropriate policies, greenhouse gas emissions from transport in the European Union rose 36 per cent from 1990-2006, if we include all current member states.

Sadly, rail and inland waterways are experiencing a decline in their share of freight movements. These factors provide reasons for the Government and Kent County Council to provide belated leadership in this sector and systematically reduce long-distance freight movement through Kent and throughout the UK in general.

Kent congestion is a cost to business, a source of air pollution that is injurious to health and a blight upon town centres. This is not inevitable: it is a failure which can be corrected through taxing foreign HGVs and reducing the number of roads such vehicles may use.

Pushing long-distance freight on to the railways is essential to the wellbeing of Kent communities.

Caroline Lucas, Green Party MEP for Kent and Medway

To absent friends …

The Hythe West by-elections were well and truly overdue. We had to wait a long time for the Conservatives to acknowledge the wishes of residents in wanting their absent councillors to step down.

Indeed, our MP didn't attempt to speed this matter along either. I'm delighted to have been elected as Hythe West's district councillor and would like thank everyone for their support on polling day.

I received many messages of goodwill, not only from the residents of Hythe West but from Hythe as a whole, and I appreciate and thank all in taking the time to send them.

Cllr Neil Matthews, Hythe West

Bring the Mediterranean into your Kentish garden

By JANE JEWITT

FOR me Mediterranean gardens are of two types. Either they are flat, and laid mainly to patio with lots of pots, and a place to eat; or they spread down a slope and are planted as if the seeds had rolled down the hillside and grown where they landed.

Two conditions are needed to create a good Mediterranean garden here in England. The site must be south-facing; it has to be in full sun all day long to allow it to heat up. The heat is essential for the type of plants that will be grown here. Secondly the site has to be very free-draining. Mediterranean plants will not tolerate heavy soil.

Patio and pots

If your site is level, first lay out a patio with generous proportions. Make sure there is ample space for tables and chairs, sun-loungers and games. Add enough space for a jumble of terracotta pots, they will form the decorative elements of the garden. One or two of the pots, the largest ones, will be pure ornament. Plant the remainder with evergreen shrubs and perennials. This will be a part of your garden that everyone will gravitate towards, it will be relaxing, will smell wonderful and look beautiful.

Herbs with aromatic foliage are vital; thyme, rosemary, sage and marjoram. These are the most important elements of the planting. The aromatic foliage will zing in the air on hot days, and your sense of smell will transport you back to Greece, Italy or Spain. You will relax immediately.

Other plants will add structure and colour. Add a lemon tree if you can nurture it or an Agave for a plant that thrives on neglect. For a riot of colour throughout the summer what better than the good old geranium, (correctly called Pelargonium) the sharp oranges and reds look wonderful against any background. Remember that these will all need protection from the winter cold.

A sloping site will be planted with a range of Mediterranean plants. Tall narrow trees will form the structural planting. The pencil cedar is not fully hardy in the UK, and can look a bit ragged. Better to choose Chamaecyparis 'Grayswood Pillar', the foliage is grey-blue and the tree will reach four metres tall with a spread of only half a metre. For a smaller tree plant growing to 1.5 metres choose Chamaecyparis thyoides 'Ericoides', it is conical in shape and has bright green foliage that turns purple in the winter cold.

The trees will cast no shade and so a shrub under-story of Ceanothus, Cistus, Senecio, Santolina, are evergreen and will provide ground-cover as well as flowers during the summer.

Perennials will be used to add seasonal interest, Acanthus, Geranium, Nepeta and fennel will add texture with a range of foliage effects. The feathery foliage of fennel, in green or bronze, makes a very pretty plant, but don't allow it to run to seed. Acanthus is a large stately plant, with leaves about a metre long, dark, glossy and jagged, and a magnificent flower spike in midsummer.

I will weave a number of trees across the site, and make informal paths of flat stones through the garden. When I make my way across the paths I will come up against all the plants, brush the foliage, crush a few leaves and pick some herbs for the kitchen.

IF there's one interior style that can help us sail calmly through these stormy times, it's a seafaring one.

Whether you call it nautical – the trendy term for a look that's taken the fashion catwalk by storm – or coastal, the secret of its enduring appeal is its soothing colours and a sunny vibe.

Done well, this style could give you the feeling that you've escaped to a tranquil holiday hideaway, where the beach and sea seems but a stroll from your door, even if your actual location is strictly urban.

"The nautical trend is hugely popular at the moment perhaps because we're all hankering to escape to peaceful sanctuaries," says designer Joanna Wood.

"You can play with all sorts of colours to provide a fresh, ship-shape, contrast. So think navy blue, pillar box red, pale blue and then accent with light and dark neutrals like taupe, white, or ivory."

Her collection of coastal accessories would gladden the heart of anyone seeking 'sailor style', and includes wooden yachts, starfish, and dishes made from pebbles.

Luckily trawling the rest of the high street for accessories is easy as its awash with blue and white goodies, and there's also a great choice of online companies offering everything from driftwood to 'beach signs'.

One word of warning though, you don't want to make your home look like a beached cabin cruiser.

For success, try either an elegant whitewashed New England look or an understated 'beach hut' style advises Annie Deakin, editor of mydeco.com.

She says: "Often, adding a hint of a trend is stronger and more stylish than doing a complete image overhaul.

"If you go over the top with your nautical theme, it can end up being too contrived. Start by using natural, chalky paints to get that soft, slightly sun-bleached look, and then accessorise."

We've gone beachcombing and found all the elements so you can sail away in style.

Colour me coastal

Seaside homes have an inherent simplicity that helps to make them practical and calming spaces.

Take inspiration from seashore shades, such as traditional blue and white, but use golden or tawny shades to echo those other essentials. Wicker and rope also work well.

Companies like Farrow & Ball and Fired Earth are natural destinations for beautiful subtle sea-faring shades of white and blues.

For a more dazzling Mediterranean style, look for blues from aquas and turquoise through to navy, and ground a scheme by using terracotta and pale stone colours which are characteristic of villas and haciendas.

B&Q's wallpaper, Colours Stockholm, £11.98 a roll, mimics sunbleached tongue and groove panelling.

Stow-away style

There's nothing stiff and starchy about 'beach hut' homes, which makes them ideal for old or recycled furniture that can be painted or reupholstered to gain a new lease of life.

"Beachcoming is the inspiration and the theme when you decide to furnish a room in seashore style," says Andrea Spencer, author of Seaside Style, which is filled with ideas and projects.

"Hunt through junk shops and salvage yards for old furniture, floorboards, wooden crates and pallets, all of which can be stripped and varnished or painted."

She also suggests large, comfy sofas, perhaps smartened up with white or blue cotton throws, steamer trunks, or wicker laundry hampers for storage for bedding or toys.

And for lazy days, try lounging in wicker, directors or even traditional deckchairs, which can be used indoors or outdoors.

Get the look: Make sure the view's coastal with a Novatec blind depicting yachts at sea, Walton Boats. Blinds start from £49.

Either paint floorboards white or splash out on flooring, B&Q's Aqua LOC Limed Oak Effect, £14.98 (per sq metre).

Add other finishing touches from the store like Bedcrest Med Printed Duvet set in navy, from £10.97 for a single set, a blue and white stripe cotton rug, £24.98 and framed prints, Beach Huts, £26.98, or yachts, Kate II, £54.98.

Coastline chic

If 'shabby chic' seaside's not your taste, emulate the sophistication of the clapboard homes Stateside in places such as Maine.

There are plenty of interiors companies to choose from. New England Lifestyle, whose ranges are made in West Sussex, is inspired by the American look.

For instance, there's a classic range of white painted furniture, such as a roomy Burlington dresser, £593. Its brilliant range of accessories features a striking wooden New England flag, £128, white wooden lighthouse £98, pastel beach hut money boxes, four for £24.

Cornwall is the template for Laura Ashley's look, and new blue and white Keaton stripe fabric, £20 a square metre, is perfect for upholstering furniture.

Scatter cushions such as Beach Hut, £28 and a striped Mylor, £26, new Whitewashed woven trunks, £70 for two. For a child's room, Beach hut bunting, £15, is a lovely touch.

Plunder Nautical Living, for an up-market take on the look. It's full of fab striped bedding, as well as fabrics, cushions from around £39.99 each, and nautical brass tripod lamps, from £119 each.

Shoreline details

Collecting shells, pebbles and driftwood from days or trips away and displaying them will bring back happy memories as well as be ideal 'flotsam and jetsam' for a room. Or collect it from the comfort of your armchair by surfing the net to find themed products.

I love the Nautical Cushion set, £25, which includes a Life Ring and a Telegraph cushion, which could delight big and little sailors, and a Beach Hut Mirror, £58.

Spell out your coastal desire with a driftwood wall plaque, saying: "Take Me To The Seaside". All from mydeco.com.

If those are too novelty, there's plenty of accessories to choose from.Visit www.notonthehighstreet.com. My favourite are the simple linen cushions embellished with the words Sea, Sand or Surf, £65 each.

A few simple things to help you save

NEW research from the Energy Saving Trust reveals more than half of the South East are 'DIY shy' and not confident enough to use basic practical skills which will enable them to improve their home.

Yet over half of this group in the region say that in the current economic climate they would prefer to 'improve' their current property, rather than move house.

The UK-wide survey of more than 2,000 consumers launches a new campaign from the Energy Saving Trust urging DIY shy householders in the South East to brush up on their skills to not only improve their homes, but make significant cash savings.

The UK's leading organisation set up to help people fight climate change reveals that DIY

Shy householders in the South East could collectively save the nation around £29.4 million and 158,000 tonnes of carbon dioxide CO2.

The average home in the South East emits 6.2 tonnes of CO2 per year.

Making energy-saving home improvements is one of the simplest ways for householders to save money and reduce their impact on the environment.

If all DIY shy householders in the South East faced their fears to tackle some of the jobs they dread most, collectively they could have the same impact as taking 54,000 cars off the road.

By tackling four simple-to-do home improvements the DIY shy in the South East can shave around £140 off their annual fuel bill, add value in the long-term to their existing home and save cash for the harder-to-do projects best left to a professional Energy Saving Trust chief executive Philip Sellwood said: "Everyone's purse strings are tighter nowadays, and this is the perfect time to take stock and check which DIY jobs will save you cash on the household bills.

"But our research shows many Brits are shying away from easy cash savings by ignoring simple, energy saving tasks which need to be done around the home. This is a real shame.

"We urge householders to do a free Home Energy Check at the Energy Saving Trust's website:www.energysavingtrust.org.uk/check to find out which simple things – from draught-proofing to bleeding the radiators – they could do. I am sure they will be surprised about the savings they're missing out on."

Energy and climate change minister Joan Ruddock said: "It really is easy for householders to save energy, save money and help tackle climate change.

"If households across the UK took a few simple steps, not only would they make significant savings on their energy bills, but the whole country would benefit through reduced carbon emissions.

"The Government-funded ACT ON C02 advice line (0800 512 012) run by the Energy Saving Trust, provides plenty of easy-to-follow tips on straightforward DIY jobs we can all do."

Andrew Leech, executive director of the National Home Improvement Council, said: "Straightforward home improvements such as those suggested by the Energy Saving Trust should be at the forefront of every householder's 'things to do' around the home.

"They are not difficult tasks and are well within the capability of most individuals but will make all the difference to the long-term efficiency and performance of a property.

"At this time of year in particular, it makes sense for all homeowners to take a close look at their home. Some DIY jobs may be within the scope of the average person, others may need professional attention.

"Our message is 'don't delay' because a stitch in time saves nine and, more often than not, money too."

For more information about making energy saving home improvements yourself, to save money and carbon dioxide at home, contact your local Energy Saving Trust advice centre on 0800 512 012 or visit the website at www.energysavingtrust.org.uk.

THE Travelling Souk Website is a treasure chest full of gems for you, your friends and family, your home and your garden.

There are constantly new and unusual products added to this exciting online department store. Each time you visit it there will be new things to admire and be tempted by. Fun and hassle-free shopping.

The Travelling Souk was founded in 2003. For seven years an increasingly large group of unusual designers and marketers have travelled the length and breadth of the United Kingdom giving 10 per cent of their turnover to the hosts' chosen charity at the end of the day.

Because of the demand from stallholders to join the venture and to accommodate customers all-year round, the website www.thetravellingsouk.com was launched in 2008. It differs from other websites because 2.6 per cent of every purchase supports a charity. This online department store contains wonderful treasures from more than 100 small businesses, and niche brands which you wouldn't find anywhere else. The quality is always superb and the prices reasonable and good value and delivery is included in the prices.

Interior designer, Helle Hylleberg answers readers' design dilemmas

Q We have some old wicker garden furniture. They are still comfortable and stable to sit in, but they look dull. Could you help with some advice to give them a revival?

Shirley, Sevenoaks

A Painting doesn't really give the best result with wicker. The best thing to do is to buy a good quality lacquer spray. With that you would easily be able to do a thorough job. There should be plenty of fun colours to choose from in any good DIY store. And it dries really quickly too.

Q Our bathroom is small and only has only very small window – it is a very dark room. What could we do to make it a brighter room?

Dave and Ellie, Whitstable

A Make sure the walls are painted in a very light colour – or in white and your bathroom furniture should also be as light in colour as possible. Placing a floor-to-ceiling piece of mirror would make the room seem bigger. With regards to lighting you should choose ceiling and additional wall lighting. With the light walls and units as well as the mirror the light should reflect and make a much nicer space. Good luck.

If you have any questions you'd like to ask Helle, email hylleberg@live.co.uk or post them, marked Homes & Gardens Q & A, to KOS Media, Apple Barn, Hythe Road, Smeeth, Ashford, Kent TN25 6SR.

Everything's

By HANNAH STEPHENSON

ROSES are Britain's favourite plant, according to a new poll – but they are also on our most hated list.

Some 7,500 people voted online to establish the nation's gardening loves and hates in the inaugural Gardeners' World Awards 2009. Roses topped the poll as the most loved plant, but also the most hated.

While some loved the variety of appealing scents and styles, a long flowering season and an iconic image of romance, others damned them for "all those prickles and overblown blossoms".

Roses can also be plagued by aphids and blackspot, and can demand high maintenance.

So how can we turn our most hated plant into one that we will all love and cherish?

Adam Pasco, editor of BBC Gardeners' World magazine, insists that choosing roses is a very personal thing, and that someone else's taste may not be yours.

"Don't tar all roses with the same brush. Just because some roses don't appeal doesn't mean there aren't others out there you'll love," he says.

"There are roses to suit every style and taste. Look further than those in local garden centres to discover the rich and diverse range available from specialist rose nurseries.

"You'll find them all on the internet, with colours to suit any scheme.

Don't grow them in isolation, but mix roses with other flowers to create enchanting combinations."

coming up roses

Names play a big part in rose appeal, he believes.

"Dozens of new varieties join old favourites each year, but those we love tend to have names that are personal and meaningful.

"Their name is often as important as colour, shape and form, so search around for roses with names that really mean something to you."

If you want roses with real flower power, choose repeat-flowering varieties that bloom again and again, right through to the autumn.

"For many people, a rose without scent simply isn't worth growing," Pasco advises. "While cut blooms in supermarkets often smell of nothing, those being bred for our gardens offer stunning fragrance to die for.

"In fact, good fragrance comes at the top of the list with most rose breeders, as they know that's what people are now looking for.

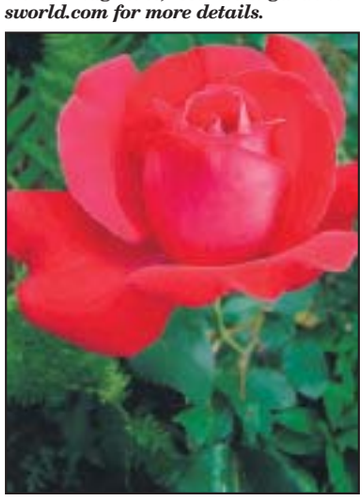
"Breathe in deeply when walking past David Austin-bred 'Mary Rose', for instance, and you'll be transported straight to heaven."

Roses used to have a reputation for being high-maintenance and demanding a time-consuming regular care regime, but now there are many new types on the market which simply don't need as much looking after.

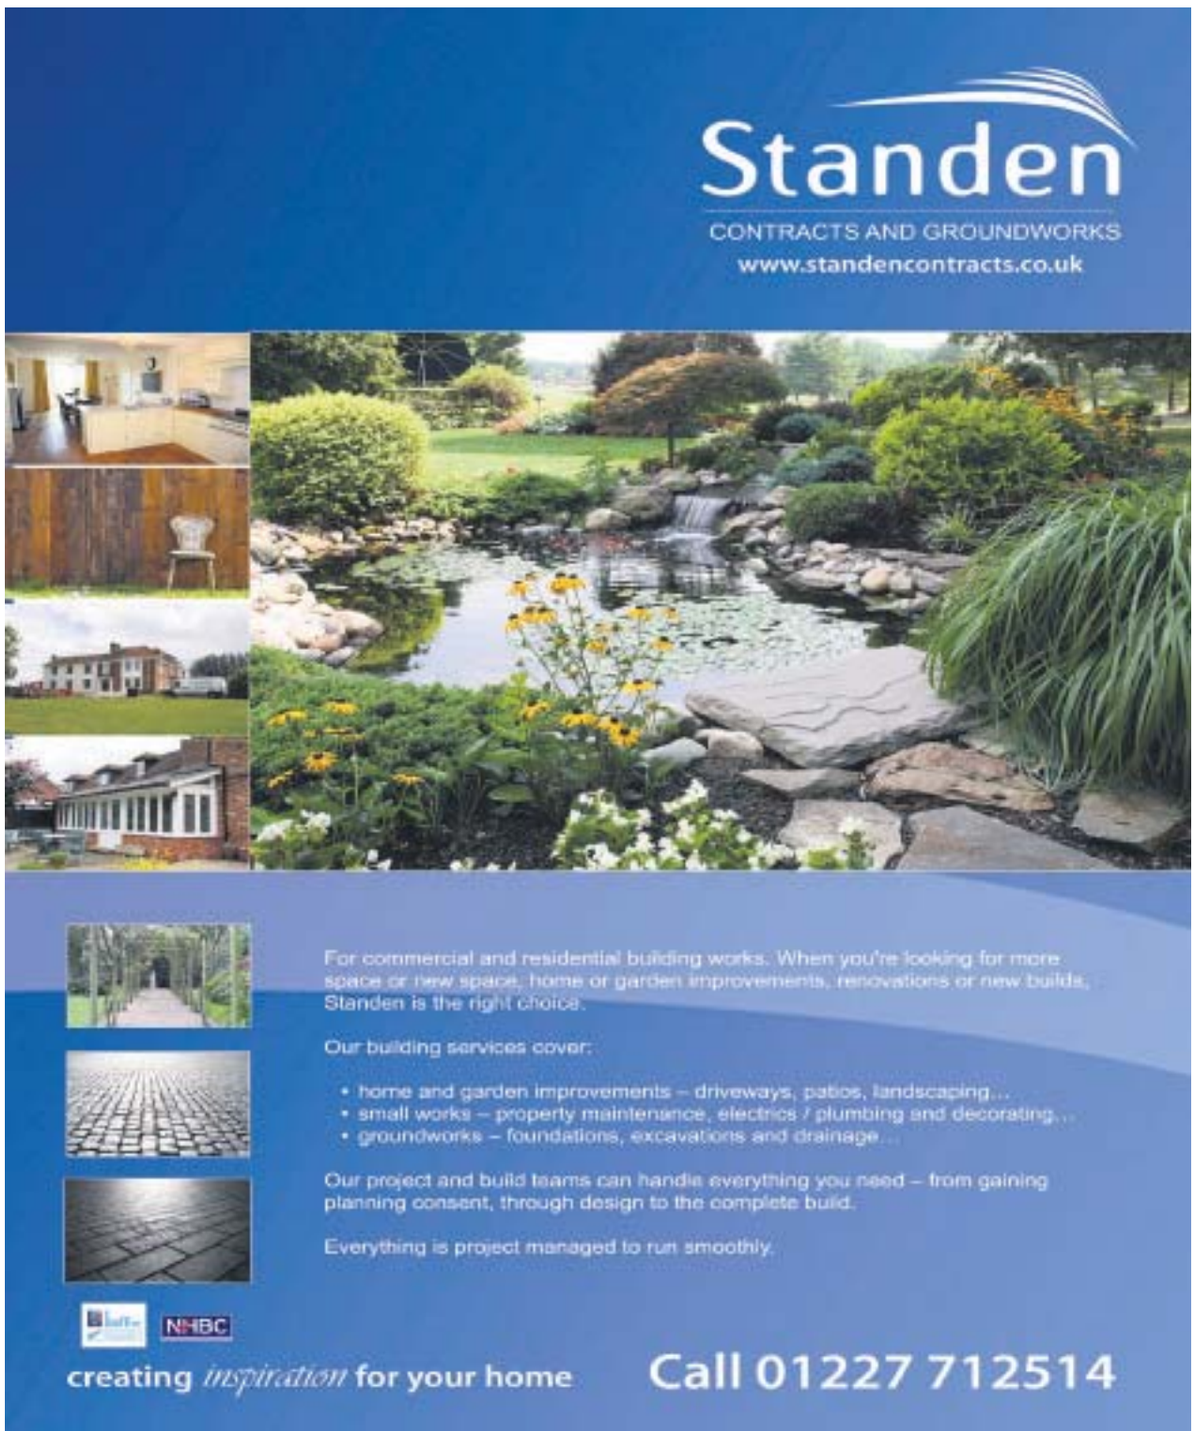
"Times have changed and we now want roses that stay healthy naturally, without the need for regular sprays of fungicides to control blackspot and rust," Pasco explains. "Once again the rose breeders have come to the rescue, and modern roses are usually far healthier than old varieties."

Sweet peas and fuchsias came second and third in the nation's favourite garden plant category, while ivy and hostas were the second and third most unpopular.

• The full results of the awards are featured in the July edition of Gardeners' World magazine, see www.gardenersworld.com for more details.



PESTS: Aphids, a rose's worst enemy attacks a rose stem



Grow your own with Dirty Nails

KOHL RABI

THIS week Dirty Nails has been sowing kohl rabi. This unusual-looking vegetable is a member of the cabbage family and is also known as 'turnip-rooted cabbage'. It is a quick growing green veg which has a swollen stem base with leaves growing from bracts around the middle and a tuft on top. The leaves are discarded in the kitchen and the bulbous part eaten. It is delicious steamed, sauted or eaten raw either grated or cut into thin slices.

Dirty Nails grows the Delikatess and Purple Vienna varieties, and sows seeds thinly in a shallow drill 1cm deep. Shallow sowing is important, to allow the stem bases room to swell. When he sows more than one row, he spaces them a foot (30cm) apart. As the seedlings grow and develop true leaves, Dirty Nails thins them to allow six inches (15cm) between plants. Larger spacings can produce bigger crops but kohl rabi is at its best when the bulbs are not much bigger than a golf ball. It copes with dry conditions better than most veg although Dirty Nails spares them whatever water he can because this makes them all the more tender. He is now pulling kohl rabi sown in March and looking forward to a late summer harvest from this week's sowing. A further line or two sown at the end of July should supply the kitchen into winter, and kohl rabi is hardy enough to stand in the ground until needed.

POTTERING

Dirty Nails is enjoying having time to potter around. There is a definite lull in the vegetable garden now that the rush of spring planting is over, and crops are harvestable all over the place. By sowing seeds of different crops a little and often, Dirty Nails has his lettuces, turnips, radishes, beetroot, kohl rabi and others at different stages of growth from seedling onwards. This succession-sowing avoids a wasteful glut and ensures that there is fresh veg in the ground ripening over the whole summer.

TENDING JERUSALEM ARTICHOKES...

Dirty Nails has cut about 45 cm off the top of his Jerusalem artichokes. These have grown thick, tall, leafy tops since being planted early in the year. They are quite susceptible to wind damage during summer storms so reducing their height now will lessen the risk of snapping.

... AND COURGETTES

His courgettes are beginning to fruit and Dirty Nails has put a straw mulch around the plants. This has the dual purpose of conserving moisture, which courgettes suck up with great gusto, as well as keeping the rapidly forming and prolific fruits clean off the soil. The risk of blossom-end rot and slug damage is thus reduced.

• How to Grow Your Own Food by Dirty Nails (ISBN 9781905862115) is available from www.dirtynails.co.uk or Amazon, rrp £10.99.

Wrong target, Robert

Cllr Robert Bliss, the leader of Shepway District Council, is reported as blaming Ukip for his defeat by the Liberal Democrats in the county council elections. Perhaps before blaming the voters, the councillor should reflect on the record of KCC and its above-inflation council tax increases over the years, and the Tory party's ambiguous policy regarding Britain's membership of the EU.

Terry Kendall, Ukip, Folkestone and Hythe branch

Watch the Tories turn

After the Kent County Council elections, 74 of the 84 county seats are now occupied by Conservatives. This does not bode well for the people of Kent as the Tories will no longer be held to account for their decisions as there is no effective opposition left.

When ruling parties find themselves with no opposition to challenge their policies, they tend to turn on themselves. This has happened in recent times in Faversham where all the town councillors are Tories. It will be unsurprising if warring Tory factions eventually form on KCC over the coming years.

Also, in the last few days the cabinet has been reshuffled and Swale county councillor Keith Ferrin, who was in charge of Kent Highways, has been sacked by council leader Cllr Paul Carter. We need to keep a watchful eye on the leadership as it is known that powerful Tories are in favour of the expansion of Kent Science Park at Sittingbourne, and the housing estate required to fund a new motorway junction. Cllr Ferrin's sacking may help to smooth the process.

Cllr Adam Tolhurst, Milton Regis, Sittingbourne

Donate you clothes

Did you know it takes 800 litres of water to make one T-shirt and 10 times more energy to make a tonne of textiles than a tonne of glass? The good news is that you can do something about this and we can all reduce our impact on the environment by recycling and reusing our unwanted clothes. Clothes you put in your rubbish are destined for landfill and will eventually release greenhouse gases. Luckily, there is a simple solution. Recycle Week 2009's theme is 'Let's waste less', so why not donate anything you or your family no longer wear to charity? Your gift will be helping others and the planet.

The Salvation Army Trading Company (SATCoL) operates the UK's largest textile recycling operation.

The monies we raise from the sale of clothes you donate to us is gift-aided to the Salvation Army to support its work with disadvantaged people across the UK. This work includes a network of 57 homeless shelters, programmes that support children, young people and families, residential centres for older people, a family tracing service and help for those suffering from addictions. SATCoL has 3,800 clothing collection banks. Find your nearest one at www.wear2bank.co.uk.

Some clothing collection banks are purely run for profit or only a fraction of the proceeds goes to charity. By choosing a SATCoL bank you can be reassured that your gift is making a genuine contribution to the lives of those less fortunate. Make a difference and make sure your clothes don't go to waste.

Paul Ozanne, national co-ordinator, SATCoL

Heart of the matter

We both enjoy pushing ourselves to the limit and living life to the extreme. Tests of endurance and raising funds have become an important part of our lives and we're also delighted to have become patrons of the charity Cardiac Risk in the Young (CRY).

You don't have to be super-fit or an Olympic medallist to take part in CRY's annual fundraising challenge. Now in its third year, the Heart of London Bridges Walk takes place on July 26 and will see hundreds of people come together to raise awareness and funds for this special charity. Walkers will cross some of the capital's best-known bridges and pass 12 of London's most famous landmarks – representing the 12 apparently fit and healthy young people (35 and under) who die every week in the UK from undiagnosed cardiac conditions. To find out more or to sign up for the walk, visit www.c-r-y.org.uk or call 01737 363 22.

CRY patrons David Walliams, actor and comedian, and James Cracknell OBE, Olympic rowing champion

KENT ADULT EDUCATION

HADLOW COLLEGE

Canterbury College

Kent County Council

Scheme teens honoured for hard work

TEENAGERS who have been taking part in schemes to encourage them to stay in education have been recognised at an awards ceremony.

Medway Council said it runs five different programmes every year to help 14 to 16-year-olds as part of the National Key Stage 4 engagement project.

This year 335 teenagers from Medway's schools and pupil referral units, which are for children who cannot attend school, have taken part in the project.

The scheme equips the young people with skills they can use in education, training or the workplace, as well as developing their social skills.

Rose Collinson, the council's director of children and adults, said: "I'm proud and delighted to be able to help celebrate these young people's amazing academic and personal achievements over the past year.

Progress

"Not only have they achieved impressive results in exams, but they've also made huge progress in their own personal development.

"My heartfelt thanks to everyone who provides work placements, because the continuing success of this programme depends on the support and commitment of everyone who makes it possible for the young people to show what they can achieve through their enthusiasm and hard work. Learning in the workplace has paid off and will continue to do so throughout their working lives."

A special ceremony was held on Wednesday for the students who completed courses over the past academic year.

Forces event will give young people taste of high life

MORE than 1,000 young people are expected to attend a careers event in Kent promoting the work of the Armed Forces and emergency services.

Biggin Hill Airport is hosting the day, which will give teenagers from 28 schools in Kent, Surrey and south London a chance to meet and chat to the RAF Aerobic Team, the Red Arrows, and watch a police dog display team demonstration.

Colin Hitchins, CEO of the event organiser Air Displays International, said: "We have put considerable investment into this event and been encouraged by the positive reaction and support from the uniformed services.

"The occasion will provide an authoritative focus on a wide range of careers and a hands-on opportunity for young people to pursue their ambitions."

He said the Youth Initiative next Friday had been organised as a "curtain-raiser" to the International Air Fair the company is running over the following weekend, June 27-28.

Mountain rescue

Red Arrow Flight Lieutenant Mike Ling, who flies as 'Red 7', went to St Olave's Grammar School in Orpington and was a member of Biggin Hill Squadron Air Training Corp. He will be able to give careers advice to pupils from his old school.

The RAF will also be bringing Typhoon and Hawk jets, a Merlin helicopter and a training plane. The 1,200 young people will also get to learn about the work of field hospitals and mountain rescues services.

Modern tanks and armoured vehicles, climbing walls and parachute training equipment will be the focus of the Army's display.

The latest Apache and Lynx helicopters will also be on show. The teenagers will be able to see how they would react on a mission through a series of initiative tests under the supervision of army instructors.

Police, the ambulance and fire service will stage a simulated road crash to show how the emergency services work together.

Transport for London Safety and The Safety Camera Partnership have sponsored the event. The Navy and the Marines will also be giving careers advice to the young people and explaining their work.

The International Air Fair that will follow the careers event will see thousands flock to Biggin Hill, which is a former World War Two fighter station, for the flying displays and ground attractions.

Chipping away pays off for Carl

AN apprentice from a Kent college has been awarded a top prize for his joinery and carpentry work.

Carl Wheeler, who is in the second year of his course with Howard Joinery, won the South Kent College Carpentry and Joinery Apprentice of the Year.

Keith Whiting, manager of Howard Joinery, said: "This is a tremendous achievement for Carl and one he richly deserves. His standard of work is excellent."

Mr Wheeler also came third in Skill Build, a joinery competition involving people from across Kent and Sussex who compete in an all-day practical event.

Glenn Springett, managing director at Topbond, which is the parent company of Howard Joinery, added: "We have a wealth of skills, experience and expertise within our workforce and it is essential that this is passed on to the next generation."

How to plumb new job heights

THE recession is a good time to learn a new skill, according to a Kent training company.

The Lead Sheet Association (LSA) technical and training centre, which is based in East Peckham, near Tonbridge, has launched new plumbing courses.

Nigel Johnston, training centre manager, said: "With many individuals in the building trade looking to diversify and improve their skills, plumbing is proving to be a popular choice as a more recession-proof profession.

"Our training centre offers a choice of plumbing and lead-sheet courses to suit beginners and those with experience – from taster sessions to NVQ level 2."

Mr Johnston added: "With the recession in full swing, why not take advantage of the downturn and hone your skills or learn a completely new one?"

For information, call the LSA on 01622 872 432 or visit www.leadtraining.org.uk.

"Time to unleash your creativity?"

GRAPHIC DESIGNERS

£19,347 - £29,969 + excellent benefits | FOLKESTONE

It's time to let your creativity loose. That's because you're going to be developing visual solutions for a huge variety of work - from brochures and newsletters to conceptual advertising and branding for all areas of the Saga Group.

What's more, you'll be progressing those ideas through a range of production and pre-press processes. You'll need to be deadline driven and able to thrive in a large, well-equipped and busy studio.

While we're principally looking for designers, we'd like to talk to ambitious creative artworkers too. Proven experience of commercial design for print is important, plus a good knowledge of Adobe Creative Suite CS3 - particularly InDesign.

In return we offer excellent benefits including a social club and discounts on insurance products, holidays and flights for you and your relatives. On top of that, you can look forward to working in a terrific location in tranquil landscaped parkland by the sea.

To apply, please write enclosing your CV and current remuneration details to Sally-Jane Plenge, Senior HR Officer, Saga Group Limited, Enbrook Park, Folkestone, Kent CT20 3SE or email: human.resources@saga.co.uk Please quote reference number SH309 in your application. Closing date: 30 June 2009.

We also have opportunities for freelancers – email your CV to stephen.king@saga.co.uk to find out more.

IT TECHNICIAN

Salary at KCS Band 5, £16,793 to £18,471

A full time ICT Technician is required as soon as possible to assist the ICT Technical Manager in supporting around 400 computers on our curriculum and administration networks.

The networks run MS Office 2003 and a variety specific software in a Windows XP/Windows 2003 network environment using RM Connect 3 and SIMS. Duties will include hardware maintenance, software installation and support and technical support to users. The network has over 1000 user accounts and ICT is an essential resourse for both teaching and the school management.

The successful candidate will need to demonstrate their own initiative as well as functioning as part of a team, practical knowledge and problem solving strategies, high quality interpersonal skills, sensitivity to the different levels of expertise in staff and the commitment to keep abreast of new developments in software and hardware.

Application forms and further details are available from the Headteacher's Personal Assistant, Mrs M Tong Ralphs.

Completed forms should be returned by post, fax or email for the attention of Mrs E Wilson, Headteacher no later than 2nd July 2009.

This school is committed to safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children and young people and expects all staff and volunteers to share this commitment.

The Royal School of Military Engineering, Chatham

Exciting opportunities for 2009

MKC Training Services Ltd, a wholly owned subsidiary of MidKent College, delivers the trade, technical and professional training for the Royal Engineers at Brompton Barracks. This 30 year contract was awarded in 2008 and following a review we now require a number of new staff to join us in this exciting venture.

Training Design Officer - c£35k plus benefits

You will be able to demonstrate experience and appropriate qualifications gained within a Learning and Development environment and are looking for the opportunity to join an established team developing Construction and Engineering courses for a range of trade and technical disciplines within an MOD/Military environment. You will be joining an experienced and friendly team working within "first class" teaching facilities and be able to bring new skills and experiences to enhance the professional services already provided to the Royal Engineers at Brompton Barracks.

Senior Lecturer Electrical & Mechanical Engineering - c£45k plus benefits

We are looking for an experienced engineer with a background in Design and/or Maintenance in electrical and mechanical infrastructure and associated project management to teach and mentor Royal Engineer Officers to gain Chartered professional qualifications and Master level academic qualifications. You will hold CEng level in one or more of MIMechE, MIET/MCIBSE or at CEng and prepared to take Chartered Professional review. An MSc in Mechanical or Electrical discipline in preferred. Teaching qualifications are not essential and you will be fully supported to gain appropriate teaching accreditation. This is an exciting opportunity for a "seasoned engineer" looking to pass your skills and experiences onto a receptive core of students who provide the engineering leadership within the British Army.

Job Descriptions and Application forms can be found at www.midkent.ac.uk (follow RSME vacancies)

Please forward completed applications to ken.pullan@midkent.ac.uk and/or call 07725 128661 for an informal discussion on any of these positions.

Closing date: 1st July 2009

The College is committed to Equal Opportunities and to selection on merit. It welcomes applications from all sections of society. We particularly welcome and encourage applications from under represented groups including black, minority ethnic and disabled people.

Vacancy for September 2009 for a Curriculum Leader in Business

(Salary: ££££ negotiable)

This is an amazing opportunity for talented and ambitious professionals to join the academy. Experienced teacher required to expand and develop our Business Studies courses. The post would suit energetic and student focused teachers. This offer is within the expanding Enterprise Faculty with vocational courses at KS3, 4 and 5 including NCFE and BTEC courses. The Academy has already embarked on delivery of the new Diplomas and is looking to expand this - and other - curriculum developments. The post could be available from 1st July 2009.

Kent's first Academy continues to challenge traditional approaches and to drive up standards – twenty six students have now gone on to university and last year's 5A*-C GCSE figure topped 50%. It offers students an innovative and exciting learning experience. We have outstanding purpose built facilities including ICT with laptops and PCs in classrooms. There are 200+ computers in learning bays and teaching areas. Some students are independent learners, using laptops in lessons and in study. The Academy also boasts excellent sports facilities. The post includes being a member of our 6th Form team.

Please send a copy of your C.V. to the school or email jenniferspooner@marloweacademy.co.uk

Enquiries or visits to the Academy are welcome.
Please contact Jennifer Spooner on direct telephone number 01843 598550 or email to address above.

We look forward to hearing from you.

GRAPHIC DESIGNERS

Folkestone
Salary: £19,347 - £29,969
Closing Date: 30 June 2009
£19,347 - £29,969 + excellent benefits | FOLKESTONE It's time to let your creativity loose. That's because you're going to be developing visual solutions for a huge variety of work - from brochures and newsletters to conceptual advertising and branding for all areas of the Saga Group. What's more, you'll be progressing those ideas through a range of production and pre-press processes. You'll need to be deadline driven and able to thrive in a large, well-equipped and busy studio. While we're principally looking for designers, we'd like to talk to ambitious creative artworkers too. Proven experience of commercial design for print is important, plus a good knowledge of Adobe Creative Suite CS3 - particularly InDesign. In return we offer excellent benefits including a social club and discounts on insurance products, holidays and flights for you and your relatives. On top of that, you can look forward to working in a terrific location in tranquil landscaped parkland by the sea. To apply, please write enclosing your CV and current remuneration details to Sally-Jane Plenge, Senior HR Officer, Saga Group Limited, Enbrook Park, Folkestone, Kent CT20 3SE or email: human.resources@saga.co.uk Please quote reference number SH309 in your application. Is this the Golf GTI's arch-rival?

By STEVE LOADER

MOTORING anoraks up and down the land will expel much hot air arguing whether Volkswagen's latest Golf GTI is once more the 'daddy' of the hot hatch sector.

But it is hard to think of a rival that can match its combination of image, poise, quality and class, though VW itself might well have 'hatched' its closest rival.

This is the Golf GTD (from £21,850) arriving at dealers next week, a three or five-door diesel hot hatch that highlights a seismic upheaval that has seen diesel cars overtake petrol in the new car market.

The newcomer's sophisticated 170PS (168bhp) 2.0-litre turbodiesel can take the GTD to 62mph in 8.1 seconds and while that is a bit shy of the GTI's 6.9 seconds, there will be many would-be owners and tax-conscious company car user choosers who will note the trade-off – the GTD's CO2 emissions of just 139g/km (£120/year road tax) and a potential average fuel consumption of 53mpg.

This compares with the GTI's 170g/km (£175) and 38.7mpg and slightly higher starting price of £22,415.

As with the GTI, VW is also offering the GTD with its impressive six-speed twin-clutch DSG automatic gearbox, which mirrors fuel consumption of the standard manual and can be driven in manual mode.

We have not yet driven the GTD, but it can be predicted that VW will not have applied a GT badge without delivering a rewarding drive based on the excellent Golf platform we have sampled in standard form.

The diesel flier also looks the part with a GTI bumper and honeycomb grille framed by chrome fins and a prominent 'GTD' badge.

Body-colour rear bumpers give the rear end a lower and meaner stance and the car has unique 17-inch Seattle black alloys.

Stylists have also shrewdly given the cabin a unique signature: flat-bottomed steering wheel, leather gearshift and grey, white and black tartan upholstery.

The car features standard Golf safety features that have earned the maximum five-star NCAP crash test rating: electronic stability programme and seven airbags, including a knee airbag.

Green twin-charger hammers hybrids

VOLKSWAGEN group's now famous twin-charger 1.4-litre petrol engine has been voted Green Engine of the Year ahead of Toyota and Honda's latest petrol-electric hybrids.

This is no mean achievement for a low emission engine delivering impressive performance to cars like the VW Scirocco coupé and forthcoming Seat Ibiza Cupra.

Its turbocharger plus supercharger give diesel-style low and mid-range power when required, yet keep general fuel consumption and emissions lower while also saving weight against an equivalent diesel.

Driving has been impressed by versions we have tried and International Engine of the Year Awards judges said of the VW engine: "It's a masterstroke of downsizing technology and a real engineering showcase."

They went on to predict it would be the template for a new generation of high efficiency, small capacity engines.

Peugeot goes hybrid with a 'Qashqai killer'

PEUGEOT aims for 'a Qashqai' bonanza and more when it launches its own crossover later this year.

Not only will the 3008 present the same family hatchback/MPV flexibility and SUV/4x4 styling of Nissan's Sunderland-built star, but mark Peugeot's first venture into hybrid drive and be the UK's first diesel-electric hybrid. The electric motor between the rear wheels gives the 3008 all-wheel drive capability using a weight and space-saving 'drive-by-wire' control system.

Apart from this greener powertrain option, Peugeot has also shed weight wherever possible to cut emissions, fuel consumption and road tax.A split rear tailgate has been adopted, as on the bigger 4007, with the lower tailgate doubling as a seat when open.

Peugeot is also making much of an 'aeronautical' cockpit design including fighter plane 'head up' display for speed and other information.

Prices will be confirmed nearer launch.

An above average IQ

TOYOTA'S impressive, but premium priced, IQ city car gets a power boost in July with the launch of a new 1.33-litre petrol version with Stop & Start.

Pricing for the 99bhp IQ3 is to be confirmed, but it will sit above current 67bhp 1.0-litre IQ versions, which start at £9,495.

The IQ's width and comfort levels make it feel more than the truncated runabout that it is and, unlike its strictly two-seat Smart ForTwo arch-rival, it can seat three adults and, arguably, a child in a fourth seat. It can still average nearly 60mpg too – the 1.0-litre IQ averages nearly 66mpg – thanks to Stop & Start, carried over from Toyota's Yaris supermini.

Toyota reckons this cuts fuel use by up to three cent by automatically stopping the engine when the car stops and then re-starts it. However, the 1.33's extra power and acceleration raises emissions so that the IQ3 incurs £35/year road tax – the smaller engine is tax free.

Recession opens up convertible market

THERE'S a recession on, but we are promised a decent summer – counter arguments if you fancy a convertible.

But many would-be buyers are itching to jump into a market where there is plenty of choice as new and used prices have fallen after some owners sold up as finances were squeezed.

The UK has been the star convertible market in Europe for some 15 years, with enthusiasm fuelled by folding hardtops, pioneered in the mainstream by the 2001 Peugeot 206CC.

Choice in the 1990s was largely limited to the two-seat MX-5 and MGF roadsters, and executive four-seaters like the BMW 3-Series and Audi A4.

The Golf convertible – still a good buy if you can track one down in good condition – was an anomaly now superseded by the Golf-derived, but individually styled Eos (from £19,710).

The MG has returned to the market, but is largely built in China and assembled in the UK. It is based on the defunct Rover Group's final MG TF model and will soon be available in cut price TF135 form (£13,511). The MX-5 (from £16,345) is now in its third generation, enhanced by a recent facelift and available with either classic 'ragtop' or ingenious CC (coupé convertible) folding hardtop.

Peugeot is a major open-top player with its own CC range; the 206CC has given way to the far more solid 207CC (from £16,455), while the French marque launched the upmarket 308CC (£19,495) only this month.

Some contenders appeal specifically to the female half of the market, but you could argue that the Vauxhall Tigra (from £15,000) has crossover appeal in its more powerful forms. It is strictly two-seat, but looks sharp with powered folding hardtop up or down.

Like the trendy hatchback it derives from, the Fiat 500C (from £11,300) may also have crossover appeal although the 'wind in the hair' comes from a rollback canvas roof rather than proper folder.

(3) Hyundai i30 1.4 Comfort at £7,995 OTR in Shine Red solid paint at no extra cost. Price includes a customer saving of £3,500. Prices shown are On The Road and are for Government Scrappage Scheme customers only. They are only available to eligible customers who trade in a qualifying vehicle first registered in the UK on or before 31 August 1999 against the purchase of a new Hyundai at a participating authorised UK Hyundai dealer during the Scheme period. Eligibility is subject to compliance with all requirements under the government's Scrappage Scheme. Visit www.hyundai.co.uk for full details and applicable terms and conditions or see your local participating dealer. Savings shown are against manufacturer's recommended On The Road price at the time of publication. For details refer to http://www.hyundai.co.uk/newCars/i10/prices/, http://www.hyundai.co.uk/newCars/i20/prices/, http://www.hyundai.co.uk/newCars/i30/prices/ or Hyundai's Price Guide dated May 2009 reference 05/09 HB2729. On The Road prices include VAT where applicable, delivery, vehicle first registration fee, number plates and 12 months' road fund licence. Prices correct at time of publication. All vehicles are subject to availability. Where any saving offered exceeds the minimum £2,000 combined government/Hyundai contribution under the Scrappage Scheme's rules, the additional incentive applies only to vehicles ordered between 18 May 2009 and 30 June 2009 and registered no more than 4 months later, and may be varied or withdrawn at any time: please check www.hyundai.co.uk for details of current offers. The Hyundai Scrappage Scheme incentives cannot be used in conjunction with the Hyundai Affinity Programme or, unless otherwise stated, with any other offers. Scrappage Scheme is not applicable to the Isle of Man or the Channel Islands. Scrappage Scheme customers agree to the dealer supplying their personal data to BERR for its use in the assessment of the Scheme Warranty only available on new cars purchased in the UK and sourced from Hyundai Motor UK Limited through its authorised dealers. See your local dealer for full warranty terms and conditions.

Hyundai i20

Three doors argument struggles to light my fire

IS there still room in the market for conventional three-door small cars?

I'm not talking about Minis or Fiat 500s or racy three-door spin-offs such as the Seat Ibiza SportCoupé, catering for the style conscious.

No, my target is the typical small hatch that looks much the same in three or five-door format, except that deleting two rear doors saves £350 to £750, but adds more inconvenience.

Some carmakers clearly don't rate them: Skoda shuns offering a three-door Fabia; Honda doesn't bother in the case of the rival Jazz; the Daihatsu Sirion/Subaru Justy/Perodua Myvi clone sells only as a five-door; and you can't have a three-door Fiat Panda or Kia Picanto.

Ambitious Korean brand Hyundai does not offer a three-door version of its i10 city car either but, perversely, sells a three-door Hyundai i20 that I have just decided is a shadow of it five-door self.

Despite a high-sill rakish rear window, the car still closely resembles its more practical sister and the front seat fold/slide mechanism allowing access to the rear is clumsy and irritating to use and needs re-setting each time – would-be buyers with babies or small kids to strap in are better off paying around £450 for extra doors. Once in the back, the space is generous if claustrophobic, due to those windows, but then you struggle to get out.

I like the i20 generally though and Hyundai's efforts to be taken more seriously; it is now the world's fifth biggest carmaker and the new generation 'i' series is impressive, while the brand's traditional strengths of keen prices and universal five-year warranty reassure UK consumers as they check finances more closely.

The i20 was launched early this year after being designed in and for Europe (in Germany), but is built in India to keep costs down.

Longer and wider than its predecessor, the Getz, it feels roomier and better arranged while boot space bears comparison with some cars from the class above. And it is packed with value: every i20 comes with a full complement of airbags, air con and glove box cooler, electric front windows plus fully adjustable wheel and driver's seat – all from £8,195.

Hyundai is also playing a canny game under the Government sponsored Scrappage scheme for owners of cars 10 or more years old; a qualifying i20 buyer could, save some £3,000 by trading in a banger.

But he or she might also be missing out on the 'wow' factor of buying a new car. For the i20's chassis set-up is a balance between comfort and sporty, yet falls short of the driver feedback of sophisticated rivals like the latest Ford Fiesta.

And the interior is robust with nice touches such as chrome door handles, but even lively upholstery in our mid-range Comfort trim test car failed to lift the slightly dour atmosphere, though you do get a full USB link for your MP3 player/iPod at this level.

There are three engine options, but I immediately discount the 75bhp 1.4-litre diesel tested here; with lots of low-down power, you need to be careful not to make the front wheels scrabble under initial acceleration in wet conditions, yet it runs out of puff later and generally feels unrefined, in such a small car.

It also adds £1,000 to the price of the equivalent 99bhp 1.4-litre petrol, but I reckon the 77bhp 1.2 petrol is the best buy of all. The 1.4 petrol costs from £500 more yet brings little extra urge for the higher fuel consumption and emissions. The smaller unit also has a crisper gearbox and drive quality.

At Chevrolet, we believe in getting the most out of your car. Even your old one. If your current car is costing you more than it's worth, then why not trade it in? Not only will the government and Chevrolet give you £2,000 scrappage allowance towards your new car, but you'll also receive additional savings from us on selected models until June 30th. On top of that, annual Road Tax on a 0.8 S Matiz is only £35. Just make sure your car is over 10 years old, has been registered to you for at least a year, and has a valid MOT, current road tax and insurance. That's a small checklist, for a big discount.

Offer ends 30th June 2009.

THE ECONOMY IS LOOKING GOOD

THE NEW 49.6 MPG† FREELANDER 2 WITH INTELLIGENT STOP/START TECHNOLOGY

Thanks to its intelligent Stop/Start technology, the new Freelander 2 TD4_e stops a lot less frequently at the filling station. In fact, it can help improve fuel economy by up to 11.9% on the combined cycle and reduce CO2 by up to 7.7% compared to the previous model. So you can spend less time at the pump, and more time enjoying the Freelander's legendary capabilities.

Synchronica's smart move

TUNBRIDGE Wells-based mobile software giant Synchronica has unveiled an email product for businesses that works on any handset, so companies won't need to upgrade to smartphones.

The firm says its Mobile Gateway Enterprise Edition enables Nokia series 40 mobiles to connect to Microsoft Exchange, offering affordable email and synchronisation.

It has already been selected by a major Indian bank for its middle and junior management tiers, supplementing smartphones used by executives. Kathryn Weldon, principal analyst at Current Analysis said: "What makes this different is that it works on almost any mobile phone in use today."

Carsten Brinkschulte (pictured right), chief executive officer of Synchronica, said: "We felt there was a gap in the market for a low-cost, business-grade mobile email and synchronisation solution that could be installed on the corporate network and managed internally."

Synchronica has a development centre in Germany and offices in the USA, Hong Kong and Dubai.

Creative thinking in the high street

BOARDED-UP shops could be a thing of the past in Kent's high streets if town centre managers run with ideas being put forward by the Government.

Peter Daniels, associate solicitor with Chatham-based Stephens & Son LLP, said: "The county could open the doors to an artistic and creative revival if town centre managers heed government proposals."

In a new guide, Looking After Our Town Centres, the Government suggests creating so-called 'meanwhile leases' that permit a council to take on and sublet a property.

This removes some of the risks that could be encountered by a commercial landlord.

And under this type of lease, closed retail units could be reopened as social enterprises, offering everything from education and learning support to art and cultural exhibitions.

These would operate on a non-commercial basis, and mean people or charities with the funds to take on premises – but without the track record commercial landlords need – would have an outlet, while the town would also benefit.

The Government recently raised the threshold for which landlords are liable for empty business rates from £2,200 to £15,000.

However, landlords would not have to pay business rates for properties occupied by social enterprises. Mr Daniels has clients who have identified opportunities but are limited by financial and planning constraints. He believes the initiative could be a win-win situation if local authorities take up some of the recommendations.

PETER DANIELS: A greater good

He said: "Nobody likes to see boarded-up shops, but few businesses have the confidence to open in this economic climate. There are tremendous costs involved in starting a new venture, including surmounting the red tape to obtain planning permission or change of use for premises.

"Local authorities might also like to exercise their powers to permit change of use without recourse to committee and the need to obtain planning permission, which can be time-consuming and costly.

"These are quite radical proposals when you consider the normal permissions required to take on the lease of a retail unit.

"However, we are living in challenging times and it would be good to see local authorities respond in the right spirit.

"Vibrant town centres are good for business, they enthuse and encourage, while boarded-up shops have a negative impact.

"These proposals can only be for the greater good."

FSB reports upbeat mood

KENT'S small businesses are more upbeat about the future than they've been for two-and-a-half years.

A straw poll of members of the county's Federation of Small Businesses has given a lift to the FSB's six-monthly business barometer. Nearly 240 responses showed a reversal of the decline in business prospects and sales seen in the last 30 months.

Sixteen per cent of small businesses reported improved prospects for the coming 12 months, up from just four per cent in November, although still remaining below May, last year, and half the level in 2007.

Sales compared with 12 months ago have also recovered slightly, with 54 per cent of respondents recording the same or better turnover than May, 2008.

Operating costs are still the main concern and they are keeping profits below last year for 52 per cent of respondents.

Roger House, chairman for the FSB in Kent, said: "Entrepreneurs need to be proactive to get more business and our barometer indicates small businesses are working hard to overcome the financial crisis."

The FSB has 7,000 members in Kent and Medway.

Workshops can take terror out of redundancy

KENT companies being forced to make staff redundant have the chance to provide employees with some hope for the future with a new workshop programme aimed mainly at the over-40s.

After a successful pilot, Shape Your Future, a two-and-a-half day workshop designed by Business Link and offering staff facing redundancy chances to explore options and possible self-employment, is going countywide.

Sharon Massingham, who designed the programme, said: "The feedback we have had from delegates who attended the pilot in Medway was extremely positive.

"Redundancy is a very difficult issue to address, not just for employees but also for their bosses who are often reluctant to let them go.

"Employers making a series of people redundant and able to make an investment in their staff should give us a call.

"We run our programme on site and help ensure that employees who are about to lose their jobs know what their options are."

She added: "Although it's primarily aimed at the over-40s, the programme can be beneficial to people of all ages. With unemployment continuing to rise, more mature workers are particularly vulnerable at the moment.

"They may be feeling that they won't find work again, but our course is designed to help them get their self-confidence back.

"Anyone who has been made redundant must remember they still have the same skills and experience they had when they were employed and we can help people recognise that.

"The current climate offers opportunities to anyone willing to look for them. Perhaps you have a hobby or an interest that could be turned into a profitable business?

"It is worth exploring all your options and finding out whether your dream job could be working for yourself."

A large number of delegates who have taken part have now signed up for Business Link's business start-up courses. Shape your Future is funded by the South East England Development Agency (Seeda). Details on 01732 878586.

Channelling aspirations

KENT marketing agency Adams Creative helped a leading spinal injury charity, Aspire, promote its flagship fundraising event and raise an amazing near-half million pounds last year.

Aspire's Channel Swim has been held for the past 10 years and in 2008 Adams Creative was appointed to give it a fresher and more dynamic image.

Those taking part swim equivalent of the English Channel – 22 miles – in any swimming pool over a 12-week period. Funds are raised through sponsorship.

Aspire hoped to raise £420,000 in the 2008 Channel Swim but made a whopping £482,285.

Chris Field, head of fundraising, said: "The 2008 Channel Swim was our most successful to date."

Adams Creative, which has offices in Ashford and Maidstone, also designed a website and encouraged participants to raise more money by redirecting them to a Justgiving web page after they registered for the event online.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Jam Sandwich with a pint of Sheps is Tom's ultimate night

Shepherd Neame is becoming world famous. Its Kentish ales and award-winning pubs are high profile, but it's what goes on behind the scenes that makes Britain's oldest brewer so successful.

Tom Falcon joined the Faversham-based company just under a year ago as production and distribution director, with the challenge of modernising Sheps' brewing and distribution, without sacrificing tradition or compromising quality.

New to the brewing industry, Mr Falcon drew on his background in logistics and business improvement to introduce new methods and ways of working.

Responsible for the whole operational process from hop to bar top, his role includes working with suppliers, overseeing production and packaging, managing the distribution centre and ensuring beer reaches customers in perfect condition.

He has already made significant improvements. He's reckoned to be a strong leader who values contributions from all employees and believes in helping his team reach its full potential.

As Sheps continues to grow, Mr Falcon expects the same momentum over the next 12 months, coupling investment in latest information and management systems and new technology, with the traditions of experience. He spoke to KOS Media:

Q What is your background and how did it fit in with your job at Sheps?

A My background is in transport and logistics and prior to joining I was a member of Maersk's executive team in the UK, responsible for business and operational improvements.

My career has taken me around the world – from drilling for water in the Kalahari desert in South Africa to studying for an MBA in France.

Sheps was looking for someone with relevant skills and experience, but from outside the brewing and pub industry. I have been able to bring fresh thinking to its key operational areas, especially in regards to manufacturing and process improvements.

Q What changes have you carried out, and what are the measured outcomes?

A One of the biggest changes has been the development of how the team works together. I think it's very important to create a modern and open culture where everyone is encouraged to contribute ideas and help with problem solving.

We have clear objectives and can see how they're being met.

We've introduced a new computer system – SAP – which enables us to look at the whole supply chain, from purchasing raw materials to delivering beers to pubs.

The system tracks the whole process and can produce delivery notes, invoices and assist with production planning and warehouse management.

It means we can monitor demand and sales in real time, and help reduce stock levels and improve availability by getting our beer to market faster.

Then of course there's our new bottling line, which will double our capacity and more consistently produce high volumes of bottled beer, to meet demand from customers and the growing take-home market. It will also reduce energy costs.

Q What are your plans for the next 12 months and how do you aim to achieve those targets?

A It's still early days, and I'll be looking to continue the projects and initiatives that have been put in place over the last year.

For example, one of the key areas will be continuing to improve warehouse operations – such as reducing loading times and forklift journeys.

It's simple measures like these that make such a difference to the supply chain.

Q How much of Sheps' production is carried out with resources from local suppliers?

A Sheps has always been proud to work with local suppliers.

All our beers are made from Kentish hops and where possible we use local barley, as well as water from the brewery's artesian well.

I find it very encouraging that despite rivalry from outside the region, Kent businesses are still capable of providing great products at competitive prices.

Q How do you relax?

A Perhaps relax isn't the right word, but my four young children certainly keep me entertained.

If it's peace and quiet I'm after, I enjoy fishing. I play tennis, too.

Although the ultimate escape for me has to be playing guitar in rock band Jam Sandwich.

Pharon Independent Financial Advisers Ltd

THOUSANDS of investors who have a certain type of policy with Aviva (formerly Norwich Union) will shortly be receiving a pack asking them to make a choice on a reattribution offer.

This essentially means Aviva has money it describes as 'orphaned', or an 'inherited estate' – money that has built up in a 'with profit' fund over many years that is more than required to meet policyholder commitments.

One could ask why it has not simply paid higher bonuses to policyholders over the years, then it wouldn't have to deal with this surplus. A cynic might say it has obviously been holding back too much, but such is the nature of 'with profit' funds.

Despite adding a special bonus to investors' policies to the tune of about £2 billion, Aviva has more orphan funds to distribute and the reattribution offer is a direct cash payment. In return, the investor gives up the right to future potential bonuses and distributions.

Investors who vote for the reattribution will, if it goes through, receive a cheque by the end of the year. Those who vote no, or do not vote, will not get a payment, but will retain the right to share in any future payouts.

Those asking my opinion will be advised to vote yes. As the proverb says: "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush."

After all, it's your money – and better off under your control.

Movers & Shakers

DSH TEAM: Jon Manley, Hayley Kingsnorth, Kate Blandford and Sarah Jennings

MAIDSTONE-based DSH chartered accountants and business advisors has promoted Hayley Kingsnorth to business services manager.

Hayley, 26, from Sittingbourne, has been at DSH for four years. Her new role will allow her to get more involved with clients and make recommendations based on her knowledge of their businesses. She will also be responsible for organising and monitoring the performance of the business sevices team.

Further changes at DSH include Jon Manley, who has been with DSH for 31 years, taking on the role of group accountant, having previously been business services manager. He takes over from Trevor Partridge, who has retired after 22 years with the firm.

Kate Blandford, from Chatham, and Sarah Jennings, from Maidstone, are both taking on the role of account managers.

KOS Media Business ADVERTISER'S ANNOUNCEMENT businessforkent.co.uk

B2B exhibition has it all

IT ALL started with an informal gathering 23 years ago – now the annual Business to Business Exhibition organised by Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce has become so successful that this year at least 1,000 visitors are expected.

It's taking place at the Ashford International Hotel on Wednesday and the event, which started at the request of members, has become one of the premier business events in Kent, attracting exhibitors from across the county and beyond.

Exhibitors encompass a whole range of activities – and not just those immediately associated with commerce. As well as the familiar services to commerce and industry such as business services, recruitment, training and office supplies, there are plenty that cover a much wider field.

Examples at past exhibitions have been wildlife consultants, saving Canterbury Cathedral, a magician, hot-air ballooning, lifeboats and driving – from go-karts to Land Rovers.

With more than 1,000 visitors expected, the business and networking opportunities are immense. In past years, deals have been negotiated which have benefited many companies' trading potential.

For those who just want to browse, the exhibition represents the best of business from the local area and throughout the South East. Whatever your interest, whatever your requirement, you are likely to find it represented here – and it will be represented by a company that has the confidence and reputation to be able to present itself in a top-quality forum. Jo James, chamber chief executive, said: "For many years we have been developing this exhibition to build it into an event that suits everyone.

"For nearly a quarter of a century we have listened to feedback from exhibitors and visitors, and we have acted on their suggestions. We, and the exhibitors, believe we have all got it just right.

"We tend still to call it a Business to Business Exhibition, but it is more than that. Certainly, it fulfils the B2B criteria, but it is a business maxim that everyone is a potential customer for somebody, and equally every business is a potential supplier for everybody.

JO JAMES: 'Kent Invicta Chamber is one of the largest in the South East and certainly one of the most active. We are very fortunate to have an excellent team dedicated to delivering a quality service to our members'

"Whether you are a businessperson looking for customers, or a customer looking for suppliers, I urge you to come along and visit the exhibition. Whatever your role, it is unlikely that you will find a situation with better potential to satisfy your requirements.

"With the current economic and financial difficulties, it is important to promote your company as much as possible. Promotion and marketing are seen as essential contributions to beating the downturn. Our exhibition is one of the best ways to achieve both."

Running in conjunction with the exhibition are free business workshops, a networking lunch with guest speaker Cllr Kevin Lynes, Kent County Council's cabinet member for regeneration, and free drop-in business advice from the chamber's senior business advisor, Malcolm Finch.

The workshops, which run at various times throughout the day, are: Networking for Success, presented by QJ of Quite Stunning; Marketing – Making The Most of Your Budget in a Recession, by Morag Welham; Telesales – Effectively Reaching New Customers, by Stephen Carroll of Performance Partnership.

And Mr Lynes will address the lunch on the Backing Kent Business campaign and what it means for the county.

Entry is free and the doors open to the public from 10am to 5pm.

Timeline

Kent on Sunday sport takes a look back at the county's sporting action of yesteryear

1909

100 YEARS AGO: A LARGE gathering of spectators saw Kings Arms Loose beat Telegraph Inn Wateringbury 79-60 in the Maidstone & District Quoits League, keeping them second in the table behind Morning Star.

The Kent Rifle Association's 49th annual competition was held on the Milton Ranges, with Corporal TG Thorne winning with a score of 101.

Kent atoned for the previous week's defeat at Tonbridge by thrashing Gloucestershire at Catford by an innings and 314 runs with Humphreys scoring 208.

50 YEARS AGO: COLIN Cowdrey made the highest ever score by a Kent batsman at Blackheath, posting 250 of Kent's 560 for 6 against Essex, but Kent were held to a draw by the championship leaders, despite posting their highest score for a decade. Essex included the future TMS doyen Trevor Bailey.

There was a dream day for Town Malling CC as they open their new pavilion. Three years saving and six months building gave the club a single-storey building that was previously a sergeants' mess at Detling aerodrome, after years of having to change in 'tumble down sheds' at the historic old county ground.

Maidstone United were admitted into the Isthmian League after ground improvements were made, with the terracing at the notorious 'Critics Corner' greatly improved by new steps.

25 YEARS AGO: PARKWOOD were thrown out of the Maidstone Sunday League after allegations of violence at the league's annual dance at Aylesford WMC.

Secretary Bill Day pleaded for clemency, but five players were banned for life. They were alleged to have chanted obscene songs, attacked a player from a rival team, Tavern FC, and done more than £100 of damage to the venue at Wierton Place Country Club. No charges were brought by Maidstone Police.

Kent's Bob Woolmer (pictured left) was struggling after ricking his back against Gloucestershire, dislocating his finger and cutting it against Yorks, needing stitches, and then doing his back again against Sussex and having to retire hurt.

His team-mate Derek Underwood topped the national first-class bowling averages, at the age of 39, despite failing to take a single wicket on Sundays.

Karting scheme puts raw talent on pole to follow in stars' steps

Young racer signs for Formula One giant

By TOM HOWARD

WITH former graduates Jenson Button and Lewis Hamilton battling in the British Grand Prix this afternoon, a Kent circuit is hoping it will be the breeding ground for Formula One stars of tomorrow.

Buckmore Park, which catapulted the careers of 2008 Formula One champion Hamilton and 2009 championship leader Button, is one of the UK's best facilities.

A year ago the Chatham circuit launched a Motor Sport Association backed scheme to get more youngsters involved in the sport.

The Let's Go Karting scheme is aimed at aspiring racers aged eight to 16 and provides youngsters with coached racing sessions at the circuit for £5.

The initiative has proved to be a hit, especially with the success of former Buckmore Park racers Hamilton and Button.

The circuit's operations director, Chris Pullman, believes he has seen a number of drivers with potential.

He told Kent on Sunday: "It has been unbelievable. We have hosted 12 days of sessions with up to 60 drivers taking to the track each time. The places have gone extremely quickly and are being filled with drivers of varied ages and by both boys and girls, which is great to see."

Two racers who have caught Pullman's eye at the circuit are 15 year-olds' Oliver Rowland from Barnsley and Josh Webster from Chelmsford.

The pair have both been coached at the circuit and have won numerous championships.

Rowland has already attracted attention from Hamilton's McLaren Formula One team and is part of their young driver programme.

Pullman said: "I think if Oliver keeps progressing as he has then he will become a Formula One champion. Josh has also shown promise and has already won a European Championship. Lee Jenner, from Herne Bay, and Sean Babington, from Chatham, are also both progressing well."

With Brawn GP driver Button the hot favourite to win the British Grand Prix, Pullman is expecting the circuit to be packed full of young racers in the coming weeks.

Meanwhile, Buckmore Park have announced this week they are to run the kart circuit at Brands Hatch.

Buckmore boss Bill Sisley said: "This is an exciting new development. We wish to expand the activities available to include karting for all ages between eight and 80."

ALL FOUR ONE: Quartet playing for charity

Golfers up for 108-hole Open challenge

FOUR amateur golfers are set to embark on a world first today as they play England's six Open Championship courses in one day, starting at Kent's Princes Golf Club, writes Tom Howard.

The quartet are set to complete the 108-hole challenge, in a bid to raise £100,000 for the Willow Foundation charity, which caters for sufferers of cancer, cystic fibrosis, motor neurone disease, muscular dystrophy, organ failure and Huntington's.

Mike Balfour from Edinburgh, Paul White from London and Justin Jeffery and Alistair Hunter from Potters Bar, began their epic golfing challenge at 4.15am at Princes Golf Club in Sandwich and will walk up to 35 miles during the day.

After a round at Princes the quartet move on to Royal St Georges, also in Sandwich, which hosted the 2003 Open. The golfers will take a helicopter trip to Cheshire after playing at Deal's Cinque Ports. Despite the luxury of the helicopter trip they will not be allowed caddies or buggies to navigate the courses.

The final leg of the challenge will see the quartet play Royal Liverpool (Hoylake), Royal Birkdale (Southport), followed by Royal Lytham St Annes on the Lancashire coast.

Hunter is looking forward to playing on some of the worlds' most famous courses and admitted he is unsure if they will finish in daylight. He told Kent on Sunday: "As far we know this has never been done before. The idea came from a couple of golfers who decided to play all the Scottish Open Championship courses.

"We have checked the times and we think it will be possible. However, if it starts to get dark we will carry on playing until we finish the challenge.

"We have had great support so far and have already reached the £70,000 mark on our target."

RETURN: Hayley Brown needs to play in UK

GB call-up could see Brown make Canterbury return

HAYLEY Brown could be in line for a surprise return to Canterbury just one year after leaving the club for Barcelona, writes David Pritchard.

The forward, who turns 22 next month, is expected to return if she is included in the Great Britain squad for the centralised training programme.

Designed by national coach Danny Kerry, himself a former Canterbury coach, it aims to give the squad the best possible preparation ahead of the London Olympics.

Kerry wants his players to play in the UK, forcing Brown back if she makes the squad, which is due to be announced soon. If it happens, Canterbury coach Ian Jennings is hopeful Brown, who has 15 international caps, would return to Polo Farm.

He said: "If Hayley was involved I'm pretty confident she would come back to Canterbury. Whilst it would improve Canterbury's playing squad I feel I could also enhance her game. It would be a win-win for both of us, but it all depends on whether she is included."

Selected

Another player who could be involved in the squad is Natalie Seymour, who is on England duty in Germany this weekend. The 22-year-old is enjoying a good run in the side and played in both games against Spain last weekend.

England play their second and final game in Russelheim today, which is their final run-out before travelling to Australia for the Champions Trophy next month.

If selected it would be Seymour's first major senior international tournament.

While Seymour is making an impact at senior level, several of the club's junior players are also forcing themselves into the reckoning. Ross Gilham-Jones is in the boys' under-18s squad playing two games against Scotland in Stirling this weekend.

Grace Balsdon and Lucy Hyams are in the girls' under-16 squad taking on Ireland next weekend. The Kent College pupils have been selected alongside Sevenoaks' Sophie Crosley for three games in Dublin, which begin next Friday.

BACK: Maher trained with Gills last year

By DAVID PRITCHARD

GILLINGHAM manager Mark Stimson is confident history will not repeat itself and he will finally sign long-term target Kevin Maher next week.

The midfielder appeared close to joining the Gills for most of last summer and trained with the squad in pre-season, only to join Oldham a fortnight before the start of the campaign instead.

Maher, now 32, was released by the Latics last month and is again in talks with Stimson.

The Gills boss told Kent on Sunday two weeks ago a move was imminent, but in an echo of a year ago, nothing was finalised.

Now, after a delay due to the player's holiday, Stimson, who himself returned from a family trip on Thursday, is expecting to bring an end to the drawn out pursuit next week.

"Unfortunately the chairman's been away and Kevin's been away so we've missed each other", he said.

"It's dragged on a bit, but Kevin's back now and the chairman has spoken to his advisers while I've been away.

"It's just about matching it all up now. I hope history doesn't repeat itself. The big thing last year was Kevin wanted to play League One football and he uprooted from Essex to play for Oldham.

"Although we lost him I could understand why he did it because he wanted to play at the highest level.

"We're in League One now and I'm hoping he comes and plays for us."

Stimson is closing in on another player to add to his squad, but it is not Josh Wright.

The 19-year-old was outstanding in Gillingham's play-off victory at Wembley, his last game on loan from Charlton Athletic.

At the time he was confident of signing permanently, but with Maher poised to join, a move for Wright now appears very unlikely.

Miss out

The Gills boss said: "If I can sign Kevin I don't think we'd do anything with Josh because they play in similar positions.

"All managers have long lists of players so if in case you miss out on a player there's another one to go for.

"I know Josh is talking to a couple of Championship clubs and I've said if he wants to discuss with us, let us know."

Stimson also ruled out a move for striker Chris Dickson, who he believes would not be allowed to leave Charlton following the Addicks' relegation from the Championship.

Veteran stopper to hold talks on his Gills future

SIMON Royce's future should become clearer next week, with the veteran goalkeeper set to hold talks with Gills boss Mark Stimson.

The stopper, who turns 38 in September, was offered a one-year deal within days of helping the club win promotion from League Two.

Royce is keen to stay on at Priestfield, but was reportedly unhappy with the deal and went on holiday to consider his options, which include retiring from the game altogether. Stimson is hoping to meet Royce next week to try and find a solution.

He said: "He's one of these guys who does go away and spends a few weeks on holiday. I'm not going to pester him, but probably early next week I'll have a chat to him to see what his thoughts are and we'll go from there."

One contract renewal which should go through without a hitch is for first-team coach Mark Robson. The former Charlton coach joined Gillingham last summer on a temporary basis, but was such a hit with players and staff he is now seen as a vital member of the first-team squad.

Stimson, who has known Robson for more than 20 years, is confident of finalising a contract in the next few days.

He said: "We had near enough done something before the end of the season, but because the celebrations went on longer than we thought it took a back seat. I'm sure when Mark comes back there will be something on the table for him to sign and we can move on."

Kent League welcomes Fisher with open arms

FISHER FC are hopeful they can be an asset to the Kent League after getting the unanimous backing from existing clubs at the division's Annual General Meeting.

Fisher Athletic, who finished bottom of the Blue Square South last season, were wound up in May after the club were unable to pay outstanding debts to the Inland Revenue.

Newly reformed after agreeing to continue their groundshare at Dulwich Hamlet's Champion Hill ground, they have to drop two steps in the Football Association's league pyramid to re-enter competitive football.

After making an appeal to the Kent League's AGM on Thursday evening, the division's 15 other clubs all approved the application.

Fisher chairman Martin Eede believes their presence will strengthen the Kent League.

He said: "As a team I'm not saying we will hit the ground running in regards of performances on the pitch, that will take time."

The other main decision taken at the AGM was Croydon's departure after three seasons.

The Trams have moved to the Combined Counties League for next season to reduce the distance the club travel to away games.

With VCD Athletic's promotion to Ryman Division One North as Kent League champions, the division shrinks from 17 to 16 teams next season.

Aussies put county's facilities to the Test

RICKY Ponting and his Australian Test side came to Kent this week to use the county's Beckenham ground facilities in preparation for the forthcoming Ashes series.

By GLENN PEARSON

The Aussies made a surprise visit to one of Kent's out grounds at Worsley Bridge Road on Thursday to use the net facilities in order to get prepared for the first Test that starts in Cardiff on July 8.

Led by skipper Ponting, who is yet to captain his side to a Test series victory in this country, the Australians started their session playing a game with a Vortex ball (a ball designed similar to a mini American football with a tail that can be thrown up to distances of 90 metres) to warm-up.

The group then split up into three groups; one in the nets, another practising slip catching and another taking high catches.

Ponting and wicketkeeper Brad Haddin spent about an hour catching balls off the edge of the bat, but not before the Australian skipper had his right hand strapped up by a member of the medical staff, although it didn't appear to hinder his practice.

Kent Academy director, Phil Relf, said the Aussies were impressed with the county's facilities at Beckenham.

He said: "I think they were looking for a ground to practice on before playing Sussex next week and Beckenham came up trumps. It has pace and good carry and is generally known as a good place to play. They seemed really pleased with it and were thoroughly professional, which you would expect of the world's best side."

Kent's Academy youngsters, who were used during the day as net bowlers, spent their time bowling at the Australian batsmen although weren't used to bowl against the likes of Ponting and openers Phil Hughes and Simon Katich. They did, however, get to bowl alongside Australian pacemen Brett Lee, Mitchell Johnson and Ben Hilfenhaus.

The Aussies will step up their preparations to face England with a four-day game against Sussex at Hove on Wednesday.

Cooky is keen to play a more important role

FIGHTING FIT: Simon Cook has been hit by injury but now feels he's ready to take his chance at Kent

IF YOU are labelled a certain type of player in sport, it can be pretty tough to shift – just ask Paul Collingwood, Ole Gunnar Solskjaer and Andy Cole.

By GLENN PEARSON

While Collingwood struggled to lose the tag of being a limited-overs cricketer only, Solskjaer never lost the label of being a 'super sub' and Cole was always known as a top club player who couldn't convert his form into international performances.

After a 2008 season in which he failed to make a single championship appearance, Kent's Simon Cook was as close as you can possibly get to being labelled just a Twenty20 and one-day specialist.

The 32-year-old, who was signed by Middlesex as a teenager together with current England captain Andrew Strauss, moved from Lord's to Kent four years ago and has proved a good asset to the bowling attack.

Fantastic

A line and length man with good changes of pace means he fits the bill for a limited overs cricketer and that's the box he was firmly put in last season.

His big chance came at the start of the season with Martin Saggers, Amjad Khan and Robbie Joseph all out injured, but typically Cook picked up an injury himself.

After a full pre-season, the seamer was left flat on his back for two weeks with back spasms which curtailed his chance of making an impact in the side.

However, after a series of good performances with the white ball, Cook was given a chance to play at Leicester last week and grabbed the opportunity with both hands, claiming figures of 5 for 78.

He was retained in the side for the visit of Essex this week, despite Amjad Khan returning to the side, and again performed well with the ball. The Kent medium-fast bowler knows it's up to him to keep hold of that place.

"It's been a while since I donned the white clothing, but it feels good to be back in the team," he said.

"I struggled a bit last year with form and fitness, but this season I have had a few programmes in place. I went away to Hong Kong for a three-week training camp that I organised over there at Hong Kong Cricket Club and they were fantastic. It enabled me to get some overs under my belt and that put a strong training regime in place and that's sort of proving its worth now.

"Last year I didn't play a single championship game. It was frustrating not getting a go in the four-day stuff and equally frustrating when challenging for a place this season and getting injured.

"I need to take my chance now and try and stay for an extended period."

With the majority of the bowling unit back fit and firing again, Kent's attack looks on paper the most threatening in Division Two.

With the pace of Joseph, Khan and potentially Wayne Parnell should he return, Cook believes he can play an important role in the championship set-up.

He said: "If I can bring some stability and consistency to our attack it allows the likes of Robbie Joseph and Amjad Khan to really run in and take some poles for us. If we can get Wayne Parnell back with that left arm variety and the pace, we will have a real potent attack."

Kent coach Willis given the runaround by skipper

KENT supporters could be forgiven for thinking a new overseas player took to the field for their County Championship game with Essex at Tunbridge Wells last week.

In fact, it was coach Simon Willis (pictured wearing Stevens' kit), on as 12th man for fast bowler Amjad Khan who left the field on day two to get some treatment on a knee injury.

Willis, 35, was called into performing the thankless task of 12th man after James Hockley was on the pitch as a substitute early on day two for the injured Robbie Joseph.

The Kent first-team coach, who hung up his gloves as Kent's back-up wicketkeeper to Steve Marsh in 1999, having served 10 years on the county staff, was asked to carry the drinks when the players were fielding and then made an appearance when Khan went off to check on his knee.

In the space of three balls, skipper Rob Key had made him move from fielding at fine leg, to gully and then to mid-off as the players looked to get their own back.

Willis said: "I've done it two weeks running now. It's not ideal, but we had a bit of banter when you're out there and the captain generally likes to get me running all over the pitch."

Khan gets back in the groove against Essex

AMJAD Khan picked up two wickets in a positive return to action after missing the opening three months of the season through injury.

The Kent and England fast bowler showed no ill effects of the knee injury picked up before the One-Day International series with West Indies during the winter.

Khan made his county return in the clash with Essex at Tunbridge Wells in the week, claiming 1 for 46 in the first innings and 1 for 58 in the second, bowling a total of 39 overs in the game.

Skipper Rob Key was delighted to have his strike bowler back among the ranks.

He said: "Amjad bowled well with good control on his return. Tunbridge Wells is not a wicket that you can bowl 95 miles an hour, it's one you have to be skilful and I think he showed that.

"He was unlucky to not get more wickets, but it's so pleasing to see him and Robbie Joseph bowling the way they do."

MBE tops off a great season for England's Edwards

HONOURED: Charlotte Edwards

KENT and England skipper Charlotte Edwards' achievements have been formally recognised as she was included in the Queen's Birthday Honours list.

The 29-year-old was awarded an MBE for services to cricket after a stunning series of successes with the national side.

Edwards has led the side to successive Ashes series wins and the World Cup title in March. On a personal level, last year she was named ICC Women's Cricketer of the Year.

Edwards, who coaches in schools as part of a contract with the Cricket Foundation's Chance to Shine programme, is hopeful the award will help promote the women's game.

Profile

She said: "It's a fantastic honour and something I'm very proud of. It's a great way to raise the profile of women's cricket even more.

"It's been a really special 18 months for myself and the team and this has really topped it off."

The side's good form continued in the World Twenty20 competition. Edwards top scored with 42 as England beat Pakistan on Tuesday to finish the group stage with a 100 per cent record.

She then scored 25 off 23 balls in Friday's semi-final win against Australia at The Oval to go through to today's final at Lord's against New Zealand. Team-mate Claire Taylor hit 75 not out in the eight-wicket win.

KENT HOPEFULS FACE PONTING'S AUSSIE SQUAD

Academy youngsters train with Australian team

IT'S not every day you get to bowl against the cream of the world's cricketing talent, but for Kent's Academy youngsters it's becoming a regular thing.

By GLENN PEARSON

Seven of the county's Academy and development squad were given the chance of a lifetime when they were asked to bowl at the Australian Test squad, who arrived in Kent this week to use the county's facilities in Beckenham.

Skipper Ricky Ponting and his squad visited the Worsley Bridge Road ground on Thursday to step up their preparations ahead of the Ashes series that begins with the first Test in Cardiff on July 8.

Kent Academy youngsters Maurice Holmes, Adam Ball, Adam Riley and Matt Coles, together with 2nd XI players Phil Edwards, Warren Lee and Charlie Hemphrey were used as net bowlers during the session where they got the opportunity to bowl to the likes of Mike Hussey, Michael Clarke and Brad Haddin.

For seam bowler Phil Edwards, 25, who made his County Championship debut in Kent's first game of the season against Northamptonshire, rubbing shoulders with the likes of Australian pacemen Brett Lee and Mitchell Johnson can only help his game.

He said: "It was a really good experience standing next to Brett Lee getting ready to bowl, it was a bit surreal really. They were really good though, they all made an effort to talk to us during practice and gave us feedback about our bowling during the session, which really helped."

Teenager Matt Coles left fast bowler Brett Lee, known to have some skill as a batsman, a little red-faced after bowling him out during the session. The 18-year-old, who plays for Kent Premier League champions Hartley Country Club, was impressed with the Australians, particularly the likes of Lee, Johnson and Ben Hilfenhaus.

He said: "It's not every day you get to bowl with one of the best bowlers in the world, it was definitely a great experience.

"It was good to learn how they prepare to play on each wicket and the plans they have for each batsman, but they didn't tell us what they had planned for England's batters, which is a shame."

For Coles and several of his Academy team-mates, it's not the first time they have been asked to bowl against top international batsmen. Two weeks ago, Kent's Academy group were invited to London to bowl against the Sri Lankans as preparation for the ICC World Twenty20.

Academy director Phil Relf told Kent on Sunday that the experience, combined with training alongside the Australians, should benefit the young players in their goal of playing first-class cricket for Kent.

"For our guys to get to bowl against the likes of Ricky Ponting, well that can only help their game," he said.

"I watched Ponting during the session and he spent about 45 minutes slip catching, then half an hour batting against Mitchell Johnson and Brett Lee before going back to do another 30 minutes slip catching.

"That's quality and quantity and hopefully our lads will have picked that up. Hopefully, it provided motivation and education from the world's best team and I'm sure they would be hard pressed not to have picked something up from watching them train."

Wimbledon shot goes begging

NAOMI Cavaday admitted she was "bitterly disappointed" to be knocked out in the final round of qualifying for Wimbledon this week.

The 20-year-old from Sidcup was attempting to reach her third successive appearance on the hallowed grass courts at SW19 after memorable matches against former champions Martina Hingis and Venus Williams in the last two years.

After two wins in final qualifying at Roehampton she was one win away from taking her place in the tournament, which starts tomorrow. But on the day she was unable to take her chances and lost 7-5 6-2 to Russia's Vesna Manasieva.

Cavaday said: "I'm bitterly, bitterly disappointed. This was a massive opportunity. I made the last round of qualifying, which is an achievement in itself, but it definitely hurts. I was setting myself up with opportunities on her serve and fighting on my serve, but overall I just didn't play well enough."

The British number six's two other appearances in the Wimbledon ladies singles had come via a wild card from the All England Club. This year she was overlooked due to her low ranking outside the top 250, which was partly down to missing the end of last season with an illness.

She is still hoping to compete in the mixed doubles alongside Brit number three Josh Goodall.
